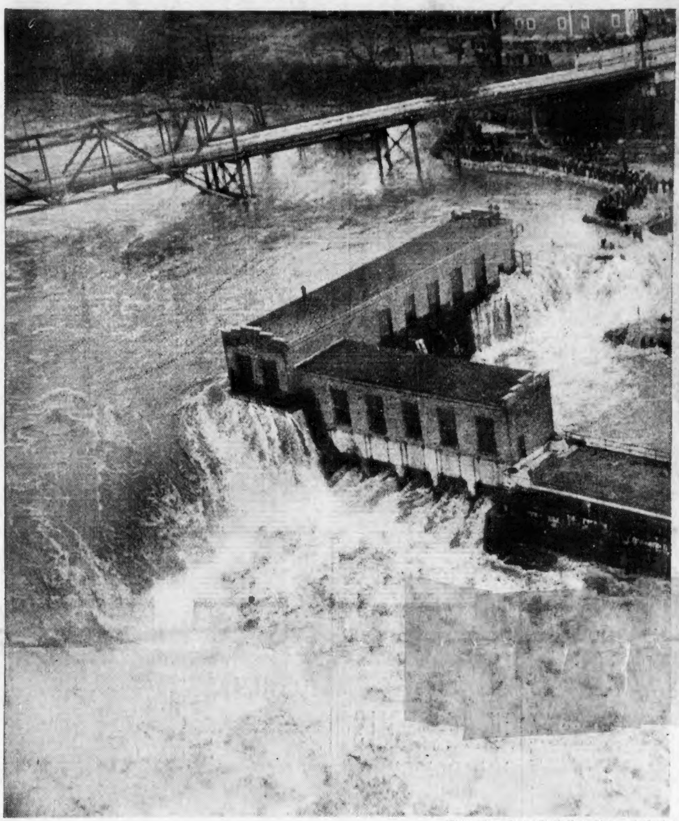
Thousands in Terror as This Dam Trembles



(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

The great Amoskeag dam across the Merrimack river at Manchester, N. H., is weakening under the terrific pounding of flood waters. If it goes it will unleash a torrent of death and destruction into the whole Merrimack valley. This striking aerial picture shows WPA workers (at right) desperately trying to stem the fury of the waters with sand bags. The flow of water to the right of the Amoskeag power plant is a result of the flood. Picture was taken by Eddie Stephan, Boston Evening American flying photographer, from an Inter-City Airways plane, piloted by Charles Sutherland.

WARREN MILL FIRE LOSS $250,000

Warren, March 20—[illegible] today destroyed [illegible] five-story brick plant of the Ohio Carpet Company, damaged 13 other houses, driving out [illegible] families, and threatened all of West Warren.

Property loss was placed at $250,000. The plant, turning out automobile mats, was the leading industry, employing 350 and operating three shifts.

A short-circuit, due to flood waters, is believed to have started the fire, but officials said it may have been set.

The flames had gained considerable headway before discovery. Help was called from Palmer, Brimfield and Ware, but the Ware apparatus could not get through, owing to the floods.

At the scene of the fire several pieces of apparatus became bogged in the mud, left by the receding flood waters of the Chicopee river, and had to be hauled out with tractors.

Sparks flew over houses within a radius of half a mile. The Riverside Inn, housing 11 families, was seriously damaged as were 12 other homes on the main automobile highway through the town.

A scarlet fever patient, John Trzepacz, 16, was removed from his home, bed and all, to the home of friends as blazing embers ignited the house.

Cassidy Daughter Killed in Plunge

Springfield, March 20—Miss Elizabeth L. Cassidy, 29, daughter of State Racing Commissioner Thomas F. Cassidy, of Pittsfield, was instantly killed in a plunge from a 10th floor window of her room in Hotel Charles today.

She was in a suite of rooms occupied by her and her mother, Mrs. Ada Cassidy, divorced wife of the commissioner, and Governor's Councillor and Mrs. Morton H. Burdick.

Police said Miss Cassidy toppled after a struggle with her mother, who remonstrated with her because she had thrown open a window to air the room.

Medical Examiner Charles J. Downey said death was accidental due to a broken neck, fractured left hip and fractured right ankle.

Mrs. Cassidy and her daughter had been here since Tuesday, the latter having come from Boston accompanied by a nurse. She recently had a nervous breakdown.

136 Dead in 11 States

Copyright, 1936, by Associated Press.

At least 136 dead in 11 states; approximately $300,000,000 damage; 200,000 homeless.

Flood veterans batten down for debris-choked Ohio river crest; water rises in Marietta, Ohio, business section; Wheeling Valley counts 17 dead, thousands without homes.

Pittsburgh flood deaths jump to 45; steel city cleans up, worried by threats of disease, water shortage; Johnstown, Pa., sets up makeshift hospital for 633 victims.

Susquehanna destruction at Williamsport, Pa., described as "horrible"; other East-Central Pennsylvania cities unable to count toll.

New deal, with President Roosevelt scanning flood problem, ponders spending up to $400,000,000, Potomac leaves battered Washington waterfront, spares famous structures.

New river ravages in New England and the Ohio valley, new problems born of destitution, panic, and drastic death and damage tolls, confronted water-weary eastern America today—its third day of unprecedented floods.

Revised figures of the known dead from the entire area totalled 136, but others were missing. The damage estimates, necessarily unofficial, soared close to $300,000,000. More than 200,000 were homeless.

President Roosevelt again delayed his southern vacation departure to stay in command of Federal rescue-relief mobilization. The New Deal considered spending close to $400,000,000 for flood suf-

Bruno Death Set For March 31

Trenton, N. J., March 20 (INS)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann's execution was set today for 8 o'clock on the night of March 31, it was learned today when Principal Keeper Mark O. Kimberling issued invitations to news correspondents and official witnesses.

Possibility of a second reprieve increased today following an interview between Attorney General Wilentz and Dr. John F. ("Jafsie") Condon, in the Bronx educator's home.

Wilentz spent an hour with Dr. Condon, but refused to discuss the interview. On his return, Wilentz said he was "not certain" that Governor Hoffman will grant another reprieve. Heretofore Wilentz has said there would be no second reprieve.

400,000 IN TERROR WAIT FLOOD FURY

N. E. Flood Catastrophe

MASSACHUSETTS—Five known dead. Merrimack Valley is path of new peril as huge waves roll down from N. H. Springfield slightly relieved, but disease menace increased. Shoot to kill order on looting. More National Guards mobilized. Milk shortage temporarily averted. About 50,000 out of work as 100 factories close. Homeless estimated at 50,000. Governor asks $8,000,000 relief fund.

NEW HAMPSHIRE—One known dead. Amoskeag dam weakening with 500 WPA workers battling to save it. Manchester is in path of greatest menace. Nashua isolated; 2000 homeless; power, lights gone. Railroad and main bridges closed at Manchester. Schools suspended in river valley communities. Huge fuel tanks, adrift, batter Amoskeag above Manchester. State asks $11,300,000 federal relief.

CONNECTICUT—Four known dead. Connecticut River at Hartford six feet higher than all-time record. Middletown isolated, without power or lighting. National Guards patrol Hartford. Business paralyzed. Willimantic Dam cracking. Thousands in "meadows" sections homeless.

MAINE—Two known dead. More than 100 bridges gone. State damage $25,000,000. Several hurt in panic of 3000 at Lewiston. City isolated. National Guards patrol areas. Androscoggin flow three times peak of last week. Bath, on Kennebec, cut off. Sebasticook, Penobscot Rivers rising. Food shortage general.

VERMONT—Four known dead. Connecticut River and tributaries receding slightly. Lack of communication prevents total damage estimate, but homeless figured in thousands. Scores of communities cut off completely from railroads and highways, including Waterbury, St. Johnsbury and other big cities.

RHODE ISLAND—Pawtucket and Woonsocket getting relief from Blackstone River flood. Three hundred homeless in Woonsocket. Mills reopening. New peril as dams at Uxbridge, Mass., weaken.

Roaring down from New Hampshire where it wreaked untold devastation, the swollen flood of the Merrimack River cut a deadly swath through valley cities and towns in Massachusetts today.

More than 400,000 persons in communities from Concord, N. H., to Haverhill, Mass., counted the perilous hours by dragging minutes as they waited for the worst.

Amoskeag Dam at Manchester, N. H., undergoing a terrific battering from a debris-laden river, was holding up only by a miracle. One of the worst menaces—a huge log jam—was relieved by dynamite. But that added to the peril of the Massachusetts cities below.

Release of that jam meant release of a wall of water, the depth of which could only be conjectured. The wall roared down over the weakening dam and on into Massachusetts.

Total toll of lives in New England so far, with only the known dead counted, rose to 29 today, as 16 new Flood Control Problem Again, Mount Everest Wanted, Deadlier Gas Afraid of the Dark

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1936, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved.

The immediate business of this country is to find some way of controlling flood waters—probably not impossible.

In Pittsburgh, a population of 700,000 is suddenly plunged into darkness, power and light lacking, water eighteen feet deep in the business district, thousands marooned on the upper floors of buildings, in some cases without food or fresh water supply.

It may be said that no one could expect one of the most devastating floods in history to pour down from the slopes of the Allegheny Mountains, but engineers might have foreseen the possibility.

Some cities, Los Angeles and Miami for instance, have prison cells located high up in skyscrapers. It might be desirable for cities with flood possibilities to locate at least one power plant above high water possibilities.

Congress and the administration have visible reminders of flood control importance. Embankments made of sand bags are hastily constructed to protect the Lincoln Monument and the Washington Monument from damage with the ordinarily mild Potomac on a rampage.

In these days of quick spending it would be easy to rebuild the tall shaft if it should fall,

McSwain Proves Himself A 'Dangerous Demagogue'

Rebuked by President Roosevelt for Disclosing National Defense Information

DURING the recent session of Congress, Congressman McSwain was responsible, and admitted the responsibility, for allowing secret testimony of United States Army officers, given under the protection of executive session, and describing the necessity for defenses on American frontiers, and in the West Indies, to become known outside of the House Military Affairs Committee and fall into the hands of foreign powers.

These powers promptly protested to the American government, and President Roosevelt publicly rebuked McSwain, the chairman then as now, of the House Military Affairs Committee, for his inexcusable action.

THIS performance of McSwain's may not have been "treasonable in effect," but the only alibi to be offered in excuse or extenuation was transcendent stupidity or a radical pacifism which impelled the disclosure of Army secret testimony and information to alien nations.

Mr. McSwain's attitude and actions may not have been "Communistic in spirit," but they were certainly damaging to the peace and security of the United States, and they richly deserved the rebuke which President Roosevelt administered to Mr. Mc-

BILLION FLOOD FUND ASKED

Washington, March 20 (INS)—As homeless flood victims or eleven states faced hunger, cold and the menace of pestilence, Congress was askedtoday to appropriate $1,000,000,000 to succor the ravaged areas.

A joint resolution calling for the huge emergency relief expenditure was introduced in the House by Rep. Dunn (D), blind Pennsylvania congressman.

Dunn declared the billion dollars, to be expended under direction of the President, is necessary not only as an emergency measure to take care of the hundreds of thousands of homeless, but to rehabilitate them after the destructive waters recede.

Under his proposal, much of the sum would be made available in the form of long-term loans to enable flood victims to rebuild their ruined homes and farms.

At the same time, Representative Ellenbogen (D.) of Pennsylvania, voiced an appeal on the floor of the House for immediate action on a measure he introduced yesterday to provide $50,000,000 for relief of the flooded states.

STOCKS MIXED

New York, March 20 (INS)—The stock market turned irregular today, after early strength on the more hopeful outlook abroad and alleviated conditions in most flood areas.

Steels, rails, coppers and aviations drifted lower, while alcohols, building shares, chemicals and motors were featured on the upside.

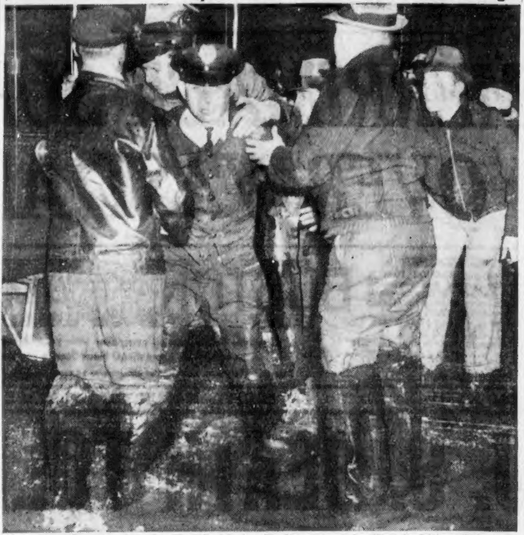
DEATH TOLL MOUNTS AS EASTERN STATES CLEAN UP

Comrades Carry Officer With Broken Leg



Many were the unsung deeds of heroism during flood rescue work. Here is Officer Robert T. Mulvey of the Lowell police department, who broke his leg when his rescue boat overturned, being carried to an ambulance by a brother officer.

ferers and to guard against repetition of this week's disaster.

TOLL BY STATES

The death toll by states:

Pennsylvania, 95; West Virginia, 17; Vermont, 5; Connecticut, 1; Virginia, 4; Massachusetts, 4; Maine, 1; Maryland, 4; North Carolina, 2; Georgia, 2, and New York, 1.

Property damage and homeless were est'mated as follows from the worst-hit sections:

Pennsylvania, $150,000,000 damage and 80,000 homeless; West Virginia, $20,000,000 and 9600; New England, $100,000,000 and 100,000.

The whole flood scene, over Ohio, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, New York and the Potomac and southern regions, was a dismal picture of rising rivers or destitution in the wake of falling ones.

READY FOR ACTION

The incoming Ohio found Marietta, O., Huntington, Parkersburg, Point Pleasant, W. Va., and other cities prepared, with mobilized armies of rescuers and workers, boarded up windows and low-land dwellers evacuated.

They were forewarned by the fate of the industrial upper valley, where more than 20,000 were homeless and property damage estimates exceeded $10,000,000.

The Wheeling area, with 17 dead, still was sloshed by falling waters. Brilliant, O., was completely submerged. Its railroad station floated away. The water fell at Wellsburg, W. Va., where it had been 22 feet deep in the streets. Thousands were innoculated against typhoid in the Wheeling-Steubenville, O., region.

Downstream, near-crest waters of eight to ten feet poured through Marietta business street, forced a college to close and flooded homes.

MENACE OF DISEASE

Parkersburg, too, was feeling the flood. Water poured along business streets, into the City Hall basement.

The menace of disease followed the flood terror at Pittsburgh, where Red Cross officials rushed anti-toxins into the city and suburban areas. With increasing danger of water shortages, it was held possible that some zones might be quarantined. The death toll stood at 45 by mid-morning.

As residents of Johnstown dug themselves out of their flood-besieged dwellings and shelters, the spectre of financial failure faced countless of the city's businessmen.

Many, heavily mortgaged during the depression, were considering letting their businesses go by default. The mayor said that only about $250,000 worth of the estimated $5,000,000 to $10,000,000 damage was covered by insurance.

From Wilkes-Barre, ravaged by the Susquehanna, came descriptions of marooned families with no food or water. One witness told of residents fashioning crude hooks with which to grapple bananas and oranges floating past the windows of their flooded homes.

At Williamsport, where five were reported dead, the flood waters grudgingly abated after a 36-foot high level of the Susquehanna yesterday afternoon.

Governor Earle of Pennsylvania ordered state "red tape" cut to aid sufferers.

The U. S. Weather Bureau at Washington said that "the Potomac and all its tributaries are falling, and the rate of fall will increase tonight and tomorrow."

At historic Harper's Ferry the mayor commandeered grocery stocks and ordered the entire population of 705 persons innoculated against typhoid.

HAMPERED BY SLEET

Stinging sleet storms hampered the flood reconstruction work in the Rochester area of New York State. Power lines and communication wires, weakened by the floods, crashed to the ground in many sections, severing service.

Company officials hastily set up short wave communication from Rochester to Canadaigua where workmen were frantically working to restor light and power to the U. S. Veterans' hospital, housing 500 patients.

Typhoid serum was rushed to Binghamton as an epidemic was feared as a result of the water shortage of two days.

Under orders from health officials, housewives boiled all water, but the danger of spreading disease lurked in soppy cellars and mud-piled streets.

Two Women Drowned In Attempted Rescue

Wheeling, W Va., March 20 (AP)—Among the thousands of men, women and children driven from their homes here there were many tales today of thrilling rescues as well as tearful accounts of losses and bereavement.

Many told of spending hours awaiting rescue by skiffs and motorboats.

Two women drowned in an attempted rescue. They were with five other persons in a boat caught in a whirlpool and overturned at the intersection of streets. PWA workers under direction of H. F. McAteer recovered their bodies. McAteer and his crews have been doing relief work since the flood started.

Beaten by the swift current, more than 100 boats fought their way from window to window in low sections of Wheeling, as well as on the island, lifting babies, women and men to safety.

More than 100 rescues were credited to a single crew—Colonel C. B. Hopkins, of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, and Frederick Libbey, who cruised about the stricken areas in a motor boat.

One patrolman located four bodies in a flooded home. He heard a cry as he turned back toward the shore. A baby girl was wedged in the wreckage. She was saved.

An explosion of leaking gas shattered a home. Four died there.

At Wellsburg, Gretna Green of the Tristate area, three drowned.

A baby fell from a porch on the island and was swept downstream. Four others drowned on the island and in South Wheeling.

Dance Escorts Marooned

Storrs, Conn., March 20—Connecticut State College co-eds who invited boy friends from back home to the formal dance tonight may have to find last minute escorts because of disrupted transportation.

No Snow Trips

Both the week-end and Sunday "snow trains" of the Boston & Maine Railroad, scheduled to operate tomorrow and Sunday from Boston to North Conway and Pinkham Notch, N. H., were canceled this morning. Washouts were still bothering the line to North Conway.

but sentimentally any injury to the Washington or Lincoln monuments would be a disaster.

English mountain climbers still strive to climb Mt. Everest, highest of the little excrescences rising above the earth's surface. Diameter considered, is the earth more nearly smooth and round than an apple? If you made a model of the earth reduced in diameter to eight inches instead of 8,000 miles, you might run your hands and eyes over it without being able to find Mt. Everest. Englishmen trying to climb it (the big mountain) are like microbes climbing a small lump of sugar.

If they reach the top they will stay only half an hour, and in spite of the rarefied air 29,141 feet up, will endeavor to build a little hillock of loose stones. They take condensed vitamines, concentrated lemon juice, fish oil, ascorbic acid and yeast, also 3400 eggs, 1500 pounds of sugar, chocolate, dried beef, dried meat, a great deal of trouble to see "nothing," but man is ambitious, likes to say "I did what nobody else ever did."

In six months only the specialist will remember who did it. The average American could not tell who was Vice-President with Coolidge.

Dr. Bogert, professor of organic chemistry at Columbia University, says the cost of a single battleship "invested in scientific research might render present day war obsolete."

Nations go to war to get something they need and science might give it to them without any war.

That would be admirable, but meanwhile Dr. Bogert, who directed the board of gas warfare in the big war, might promote peace in this country by discovering some kind of first-class new gas so deadly that no nation would dare to attack this one and risk having a few airship loads of the new gas sent to their cities. Fear is war's surest preventive.

Dr. Townsend promises $200 a month to everybody past sixty. That would cost twenty-four thousand million dollars a year. Congressmen know it can't be done, but do not dare say so individually.

Townsend clubs have organized millions of votes. The $200 a month promise made that easy. Congressmen do not want those votes cast against them as individuals.

Democrats and Republicans agree to "investigate" the Townsend movement, hoping to show that, while promising $200 a month to old people, representatives of Dr. Townsend, presumably without his knowledge, have been industriously collecting money from the old, not telling what becomes of the collections.

Congressmen act like small boys, afraid of the dark alone, but not afraid of the ghost when two or three go together and "talk loud."

In his Miami Herald, Colonel Frank B. Shutts says the government's Works Progress Administration will spend $58,851 "instructing 125 Miami colored women in the art of sewing things as used in well regulated homes."

The money will pay teachers' salaries, buy materials. More than 125 colored women have been taught to sew nicely for less than fifty-eight thousand dollars. In this case, things sewn will be given free to the needy, which may offset the expense.

The national government really is "in business for itself."

Papers by Plane To N. H. Towns

First news of the outside world in two days was carried to residents of Berlin and Littleton, N. H., today when copies of the Boston Evening American were dropped from a plane of the Inter-City Airlines.

The two communities were cut off when the bridge on the way to Gorham, rail terminus, was carried away.

At the same time the plane, unable to land because the airport was flooded, dropped a badly needed supply of yeast.

Another plane of the same line was able to make a landing at White River Junction, Vt., where it deposited a 700 pound shipment of yeast.

The entire section has been without bread since railroad lines failed.

Swain, and which Secretary of War Dern so heartily re-echoed.

CONGRESSMAN McSwain is undoubtedly as dangerous as he is demagogic; and Mr. Hearst's letter with regard to Mr. McSwain which the Black Committee plundered from the private files of the Western Union Telegraph Company is, like President Roosevelt's rebuke, a document which Mr. McSwain can hardly be proud to read in public.

No amount of falsification and vituperation on Mr. McSwain's part will relieve him of the stigma he has received and deserved.

It is to be hoped that Senator Black's purloining committee may make public other illuminating documents of this same kind.

This exposure of McSwain though wholly unintentional on the part of the Black Committee, is the only thing this committee has done to date which in any way justifies their impudence and extravagance or palliates their brazen defiance of constitutional rights and liberties.

The Rebuke of McSwain

Washington, March 20 (US)—Chairman McSwain of the House military affairs committee was publicly rebuked by President Roosevelt during the last session of Congress for making public secret testimony given before his committee.

The unprecedented rebuke was administered after McSwain had given out testimony of Brigadier-General Charles E. Kilbourne and Brigadier-General F. M. Andrews regarding air defenses near the Canadian border, with the suggestion that this nation must be prepared to seize British and French islands near our coast "in an emergency."

President Roosevelt in his letter said:

The White House,
Washington,
April 29, 1935.

My Dear Mr. Chairman:

My attention has been called to "HEARINGS BEFORE COMMITTEE ON MILITARY AFFAIRS, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, on H. R. 6621 and H. R. 4130." This public document includes apparently a full report of an executive session of the committee of which YOU ARE CHAIRMAN.

It is necessary for me most respectfully to call to your attention and that of your committee the fact that if the testimony in executive session is printed in public documents in the same way as testimony in open session, I shall find it necessary as Commander-in-Chief of the army and navy to require that in the future such testimony be given only after approval by me . . . .

This government does not in any of its plans or policies envisage the possibility of a change in the friendly relationship between the United States and any foreign country.

I call your especial attention to the fact that this government not only accepts as an accomplished fact the permanent peace conditions cemented by many generations of friendship between the American people, but expects to live up to not only the letter but the spirit of our treaties relating to the permanent disarmament of our three thousand miles of common boundary.

Very sincerely,
FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

Hon. John J. McSwain,
Chairman Military Affairs Committee,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.

The President also sent a letter to Secretary of War Dern at the same time as the McSwain rebuke was despatched. The letter stated:

The White House,
Washington,
April 29, 1935.

My Dear Mr. Secretary:

My attention has been called to "hearings before committee on military affairs, House of Representatives, on H. R. 6621 and H. R. 4130." It is a matter of regret to me that I have been compelled to send a letter to Chairman McSwain of the military affairs committee, a copy of which I enclose.

Very sincerely,
FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

Hon George H. Dern,
Secretary of War,
Washington, D. C.

Secretary of War Dern, replying to the President's letter said:

April 30, 1935.

Dear Mr. President:

I am in entire accord with the letter despatched by you on April 29th to THE CHAIRMAN OF THE HOUSE MILITARY AFFAIRS COMMITTEE. In all fairness to the officers concerned, it was their understanding that the testimony was entirely secret and was not to be made public under any circumstances.

I am sure they would not have expressed themselves so freely had they not had such an assurance of the situation. It is needless to say that their views on the points you mention were individual and had not been submitted to either the chief of staff or the secretary of war. Their opinions thereon can be regarded only as personal ones.

I was myself considering taking similar action to the one so ably presented in your letter to THE CHAIRMAN OF THE MILITARY AFFAIRS COMMITTEE, and I, therefore, cannot tell you how grateful I am that you anticipated me in this respect.

Very respectfully
GEORGE H. DERN,
Secretary of War

The President,
The White House.

CHASE VANDALS IN HARRISBURG

Harrisburg, Pa., March 20 (AP)—Rampant rivers of Eastern and Central Pennsylvania were receding from peak stages at most points along their desolated banks today, uncovering disaster in every community they touched.

Lock Haven residents shovelled muck from their homes left in the wake of the falling water. National Guardsmen sought to drive off vandals, who looted piles of damaged merchandise. Word of a shipment of typhoid serum came from Washington. Food shortages were reported.

Harrisburg itself watched the slowly falling river and sought to mend its heating and water supply systems. Four hundred families were sheltered in schools, churches and hotels. Concern was felt for the Wildwood dam, near the huge state farm show building, reported weakening. National Guardsmen patrolled Harrisburg streets.

The Delaware river, its level dropping upstream, passed high tide last night at Philadelphia without inflicting the damage that had been feared. Streets inundated yesterday were clear of water after midnight.

Cattle Go to Bed

Boscawen, N. H., March 20 (AP)—Twenty prize cattle spent the night in the bedrooms on the second floor of the home of Farmer J. Ralph Graham.

MORE WIRE-SEIZURE SUITS PLANNED BY PUBLISHERS

Washington, March 20 (US)—Publishers of seven newspapers and farm periodicals in Texas, Oregon, Idaho and Washington have advised the American Newspaper Publishers' Association today they are considering suits against the Black senatorial committee for its wholesale seizure of private telegrams.

Private messages of the newspapers, their officers and employes, including new dispatches, were seized by the Black probers through "blanket" subpoenas directed to the Western Union Telegraph Company, they reported to the A. N. P. A.

This form of "dragnet" subpoena was recently held void by the District of Columbia Supreme Court as a violation of the constitutional guarantees against unreasonable search and seizure.

A test case by William Randolph Hearst challenging this wholesale raid into private correspondence is pending in the same court. Similar actions are under consideration by the Wichita Falls, Texas, Times and Wichita Falls Record News, the Spokane, Wash., Chronicle Publishing Co., the Spokane Review, the Cowles Publishing Co., the Washington Farmer, the Idaho Farmer and the Oregon Farmer.

The publishers advised the A. N. P. A. the messages in no way referred to lobbying on the Wheeler Rayburn utilities "death sentence" or on any other legislation. The subpoenas called for telegrams sent and received during most of last year.

The western publications were under attack, it was learned, for criticism of the New Deal.

J. A. Arnold, manager of the American Taxpayers' League, was the witness who attacked the Black committee at yesterday's hearing. It was revealed Arnold's telegrams also had been seized in the alleged New Deal "reign of terror."

He was being interrogated concerning contributions to his organization, which is devoted to halting wasteful governmental expenditures. It was revealed Andrew W. Mellon was among the contributors, having paid $1000.

Roosevelt Mobilizes Aid Forces

Washington, March 20 (AP)—Again delaying his vacation departure, President Roosevelt personally commanded today the federal mobilization to aid homeless thousands.

Summoned early to his desk were Rear Admiral Carty T. Grayson, head of the Red Cross; Secretary Dern, chairman of the special federal flood committee, and General Malin Craig, army chief of staff.

Before leaving for Florida the President was expected to sign an appropriation bill carrying $440,000,000 with which to start the New Deal's soil conservation-farm subsidy bill.

On his journey southward Roosevelt will confer with Major-General Johnson Hagood, recently removed from command because he criticized New Deal work relief. The conference, it was said, was arranged by a third party.

The meeting was expected to lead to a final decision as to whether the general will be restored to active duty.

Wheeling Bars Lights

Wheeling, March 20 (AP)—It was illegal to light matches in some parts of downtown Wheeling today. Fumes were escaping from flooded gasoline tanks and officials feared even a small flame might cause an explosion.

When the photographer flew over this long railroad bridge at Nashua, N. H., he described the structure as "weaving and trembling" under the impact of the mighty pounding of the flood-mad waters of the Merrimack. Freight cars were shunted onto bridge yesterday to act as ballast. Now part of the approach (marked by arrow) has already been washed away. Note the log jam grinding against the bridge. If the Amoskeag dam goes this bridge would snap like a match.

MILK SHORTAGE HERE SEEN AVERTED

Although the milk situation in Boston remained momentarily acute today, dealers expressed confidence that re-routing of trains and other means of transporting milk to the local market would avert an extended shortage.

While dealers, producers and distributors were working frantically to bring a supply approaching the daily normal into Boston, strict orders have been issued by federal and state authorities against the practice of profiteering.

Judge James J. O'Brien, chairman of the State milk control board, declared that any dealer raising the price of milk would be called to account and would probably lose his license.

He also appealed to distributors to apportion the supply available fairly in order that infants, invalids and hospitals would have the preference in every case.

Milk dealers here expressed the opinion today that the normal supply might be reduced some 25 per cent here for the remainder of the week.

NORMAL BY SUNDAY

They said that by Sunday it was expected the the supply, being brought in through many devious channels at present, would be back to normal.

Until then, it was said, there was a possibility that some companies might be forced to ration their supplies, but indicated that this procedure did not seem necessary at the present time.

Trains from the Vermont milkshed are coming toward Boston by a devious round-about route.

The first train, bearing 18 carloads of milk for Boston, left St. Albans late yesterday afternoon. Two more are due to leave there today.

The trains are heading from St. Albans over the St. John and Lake Champlain railway to Portland, Maine, from whence they complete the journey into Boston.

Motor trucks are also making roundabout trips through the back country to reach Boston with heavy loads of milk.

Farmers are making every effort to get all available milk over the road to designated shipping points. In many cases they have struggled heroically over practically impassable roads, according to reports which seep slowly into this city.

PREFERENTIAL SERVICE

Preferential service is being given to all carriers of milk, by rail and highway.

Other shipments are being rushed here from other great dairy sections of the country, including those as far west as Illinois.

Boston dealers credited the enterprise of Vermont farmers in averting what might have been a serious milk famine here.

Easthampton Pair Serve Time in Vt.

St. Albans, Vt., March 20—Rudolph Duso and Frederick Harrison, both of Easthampton, Mass., today started to serve terms of eight months to one year in Windsor House of Correction for passing worthless checks.

VERMONT CUT OFF ALL WIRE LINES OUT

Raging Connecticut river waters kept most of Central and Southern Vermont paralyzed and cut off from communication with the world today while rising streams in the northern and western sections added new peril.

Communication with Brattleboro and Vernon in the southern section of the state came to an abrupt halt early today as all wires went down and electric power was suspended indefinitely.

New England telephone company officials and repairmen were hurrying to the state from Boston in the hope they could make their way in and attempt to establish emergency communication systems.

At all available points of communication came reports that the waters of the Connecticut and its tributaries had shattered every previous all-time high record by several feet.

NORTHERN VERMONT HIT

Waters were reported receding in some sections but from these came heartrending stories of death, destruction and the fear of food shortage and disease.

In Northern Vermont, where it seemed the area would escape the ravages of the newest and greatest flood in the state's history, reports today indicated that the waters of Lamoille and Mississquoi rivers were rampaging toward the high levels hit by other streams in the state.

Last reports from Brattleboro indicated that the entire section of the state in that area was without lights or elecric power last night.

Last reports available from Vernon where the huge dam has been threatened were that the structure is still holding out.

Bellows Falls, where the combined waters of the Connecticut and White rivers have been sweeping down with unabated fury for three days, was reported practically hopelessly inundated.

The entire business section was under water and only occasional communication with the town could be made by telephone.

White River Junction reported the flood waters had apparently reached their peak after soaring to an all-time height, three feet above the 1927 record.

CURLEY TO ASK 5 MILLION AID

Governor Curley telephoned Washington officials today to ascertain definitely the government's flood relief plans, and then prepared a special message to the Legislature to ask a $5,000,000 bond issue.

After an airplane survey, Adjutant-General William I. Rose reported to the Governor at the latter's office where were gathered the leaders of the two legislative branches.

Rose's air trip covered part of Vermont and he said the Connecticut river is now rushing over the big dam of the New England Power Co. at Vernon

Gloucester Sends Dories to Lowell

Gloucester, March 20—Ten dories and twenty-five Legionnaires have been dispatched to Lowell and a similar number of dories and men have been sent to Lawrence to aid in the rescue of flood sufferers at the request of the Adjutant-General's Office in Boston.

Lawrence also is the recipient of a truckload of bread and crackers.

THOUSANDS FLEE MERRIMACK FLOOD, CITIES SWEPT

DYNAMITING OF BIG LOG JAM SENDS TONS OF WATER DOWN

deaths were added to last weeks record. Damage is estimated at $150,000,000. Homeless are reckoned at 150,000.

Tyngsboro, North Chelmsford and Dracut are towns directly in the path of the new, disaster-fraught flood.

But the cities of Lowell and Lawrence and Haverhill are next.

Manchester, over one of its few remaining telephone circuits, flashed the message that the log-jam had been dynamited and heads of the three big cities prepared for the worst.

At Lawrence alone, the river, swollen to a depth nearly seven feet higher than its all-time record of 1896, was increasing at a tremendous rate. Nine inches increase was noted in less than two hours.

All police and fire alarm systems are out in that city. The water supply is completely cut off and cannot be restored for more than three days.

Lights, except on a few circuits, are gone.

American Legionnaires, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Boy Scouts and the Red Cross sent out emergency calls for all available to join in evacuating families.

Lowell, first of the big cities awaiting the worst of the flood, is already counting its homeless in the thousands, its jobless by thousands, its damage close to a million.

HAVERHILL ASKS AID

Haverhill called for general help from Adjutant-General William I. Rose and Colonel Porter B. Chase dispatched 50 more National Guards to the city for its newest peril.

Mayor Leslie E. Knox of Somerville raced over the flooded roads as far as he could, bringing police and firemen to the aid of Haverhill. Twenty-two police and a dozen firemen left for the beleaguered valley city.

Officials who tried to keep cool heads among their subordinates said that conditions today would be the worst in history before the peak of the peril passed.

Out in western Massachusetts—subordinated for the moment because of the emergency in the Merrimack region—there was no improvement in flood areas and there were worse conditions because of disease, and food, fuel and water shortages.

Springfield, center of the western Massachusetts flood district, reported that only a slight recession in the Connecticut river had saved the Holyoke dam and therefore had saved Holyoke and Springfield from worse than their present disaster.

There are at least 25,000 persons homeless in the Springfield area and with so many refugees crowded into the city and its environs a disease epidemic was more than a possibility—it was almost a certainty.

Tonight, with scores of big cities dark, looting of abandoned homes is a certainty too. National Guards and police have received orders to shoot to kill if ghouls prowl over districts where flood victims have fled.

MANCHESTER HARD HIT

All along the Connecticut river valley in New Hampshire, conditions approximate those in the Merrimack region. But the Merrimack valley is by far the worst hit section now.

Manchester, center of one of the biggest populations in the State, is cut in two and its homeless number thousands. Its bridges, with one exception, are all out. Its railroads are gone. Its light, power, fuel and water supplies are at a minimum.

Nashua is isolated. So is Hooksett. There are at least 25 bridges on the Merrimack out now.

Connecticut is in the throes of one of the worst floods on record with the Connecticut River, the Farmington River and scores of smaller tributaries swollen to new record heights.

RAIN AND SNOW DUE

The United States Weather Bureau declined to hold out any general relief, but the forecast for the next 24 hours was not as pessimistic as that issued yesterday.

Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont, said the bureau, will have lower temperatures, with only light rains in prospect.

Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut will probably have rains tonight, but colder temperatures may change the precipitation to snow by Saturday.

Generally throughout New England, the bureau announced, conditions will not be favorable for flood relief operations.

There is no way of knowing definitely just how many persons have perished in the latest ravages of flooding rivers and crashing dams.

Communication from the northland is demoralized. Line after line of telephones have been cut off and telegraph wires have suffered the same fate.

Up in Vermont, where sparse reports indicate that the Connecticut river has receded somewhat, the city of White River Junction has more than 500 homeless.

Bellows Falls and Bennington streets are under command of the National Guard, in many sections patrolling in rowboats and power boats.

Brattleboro is without lights, many homes and buildings without heat and acres of surrounding land as well as miles of its streets are inundated.

Four identified persons have drowned in Vermont in the last 24 hours, but there are families split up in the rural sections whose roll-call cannot be taken for the next day or so and the death toll may be increased.

TERRIFIC BLOW TO MAINE

Maine, with one known dead, is feeling the full force of the latest floods today as the swollen torrents of the big rivers roar down from the northern and western watersheds.

In Biddeford there are hundreds homeless and thousands jobless. Most of the large industrial plants have been closed from the ravages of the Saco river. Saco is in no better condition. Its main highway bridge also went today.

Lewiston and Auburn, the "twin cities" on the Androscoggin, have been completely cut off from each other—the first time in 40 years that such a thing has happened.

So panicky are the residents of Lewiston that there was a near-riot this morning when a wild rumor spread that a huge dam above the city had broken.

National Guards had to quell a fleeing mob of 3000 by levelling guns and threatening them with clubs, before order was restored. Reports were that a number of women and children were injured by being trampled.

HUNDREDS MAROONED

Scores of travelers from the north are marooned in Lewiston, since railroad connections have been cut off from Auburn. Down the river at Brunswick the Maine Central railroad bridge is swaying and ready to go. Freight cars are ballasting it.

Farther upstate Waterville, on the Kennebec, is flooding rapidly. The highway to Augusta is closed. Bridges over the river from Augusta north have been closed. Rumford reports that conditions "are grave." Power and light lines are gone at Rumford and Waterville.

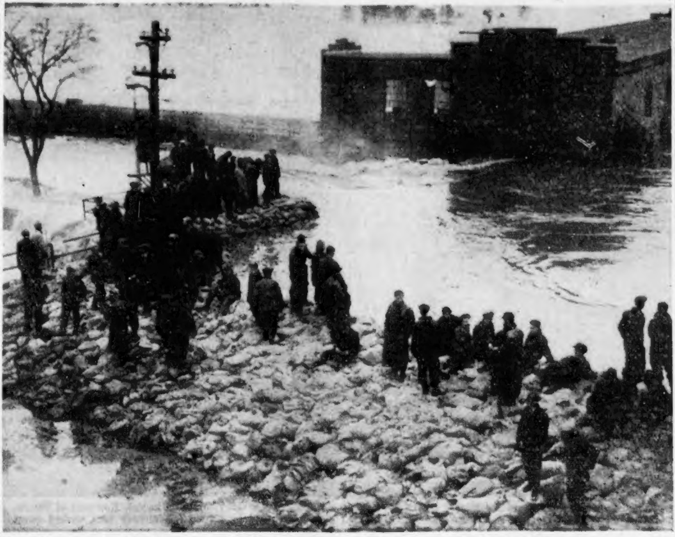
How many homeless there are in Maine is a matter of mere conjecture, but conservative estimates place that number in the thousands.

Rhode Island, only one of the six New England states where damage and deaths have been kept at a fair low, was anything but optimistic today as floods in the Blackstone river showed no signs of abating.

Woonsocket and Pawtucket are bearing the brunt of this flood. There are hundreds homeless in the Blackstone valley, and the mills and factories that re-opened Monday after last week's floods are closing again.

Should the dams up river at Uxbridge, Mass., go, as they are threatening to do momentarily, nothing less than general disaster will follow.

Desperate Workers Strive to Save Amoskeag Dam



With the fate of the whole Merrimack Valley hinging on the Amoskeag dam at Manchester, N. H., WPA workers throw up an emergency bulwark of sandbags in a frantic attempt to stem the torrents of the Merrimack river. The water surging by the Amoskeag power plant has been forced from its normal channel, on the far end of the building.

3 DANCE HALL BIRTHS

253 Children in Makeshift Haven

Johnstown, Pa., March 20 (AP)—A hilltop dance hall was converted today into a makeshift hospital to house 653 persons left ill and destitute by the Conemaugh river flood which devastated Johnstown Tuesday night.

Of the ailing, 253 were children. Three of those were born in the dance pavilion.

Dr. H. T. Kahle said the patients were doing as well as could be expected, although there were no comforts whatsoever.

Two persons died of heart attacks induced by shock, and another, Samuel Isaacson, 80, ended his life by drinking poison.

Coroner Davis said he recalled the 1889 flood in which 2235 persons died, but that the present disaster is a "worse sight."

Fear Epidemic

Johnstown, Pa., March 20 (US)—Fear of a diphtheria epidemic swept Johnstown today.

One case of diphtheria was discovered at Cambria City, a suburb of Johnstown.

Daniel J. Shields, mayor of Johnstown, appealed to the Red Cross to take immediate steps to prevent the spread of the disease.

PHONES OUT IN 14 N.E. TOWNS

The New England Telephone & Telegraph Company announced today trouble had developed on 400 toll circuits, and reported 14 towns in New England without phone service.

A break in the cable at Springfield, the company said, resulted in all calls from Boston to Northampton, Pittsfield, North Adams and Greenfield being routed through Albany, N. Y., and back into Massachusetts.

The company said its building in Winchester, N. H., had been abandoned with the exception of the offices on the second floor.

Emergency

Pittsburgh, March 20 (US)—Full telegraph facilities were restored to flood-stricken Pittsburgh after herculean efforts. Electricians connected emergency power apparatus which had been transported over the water-covered roads in trucks from Detroit.

Basins to Control Floods Too Costly

But for the fact that the cost would be prohibitive, New England's river valleys could be freed forever of the menace of floods through the construction of huge storage basins, according to an opinion expressed today by Howard G. Philbrook, deputy WPA administrator for Massachusetts.

Mr. Philbrook, formerly associated with Stone and Webster, Inc., has had vast experience in the problems of waterways construction.

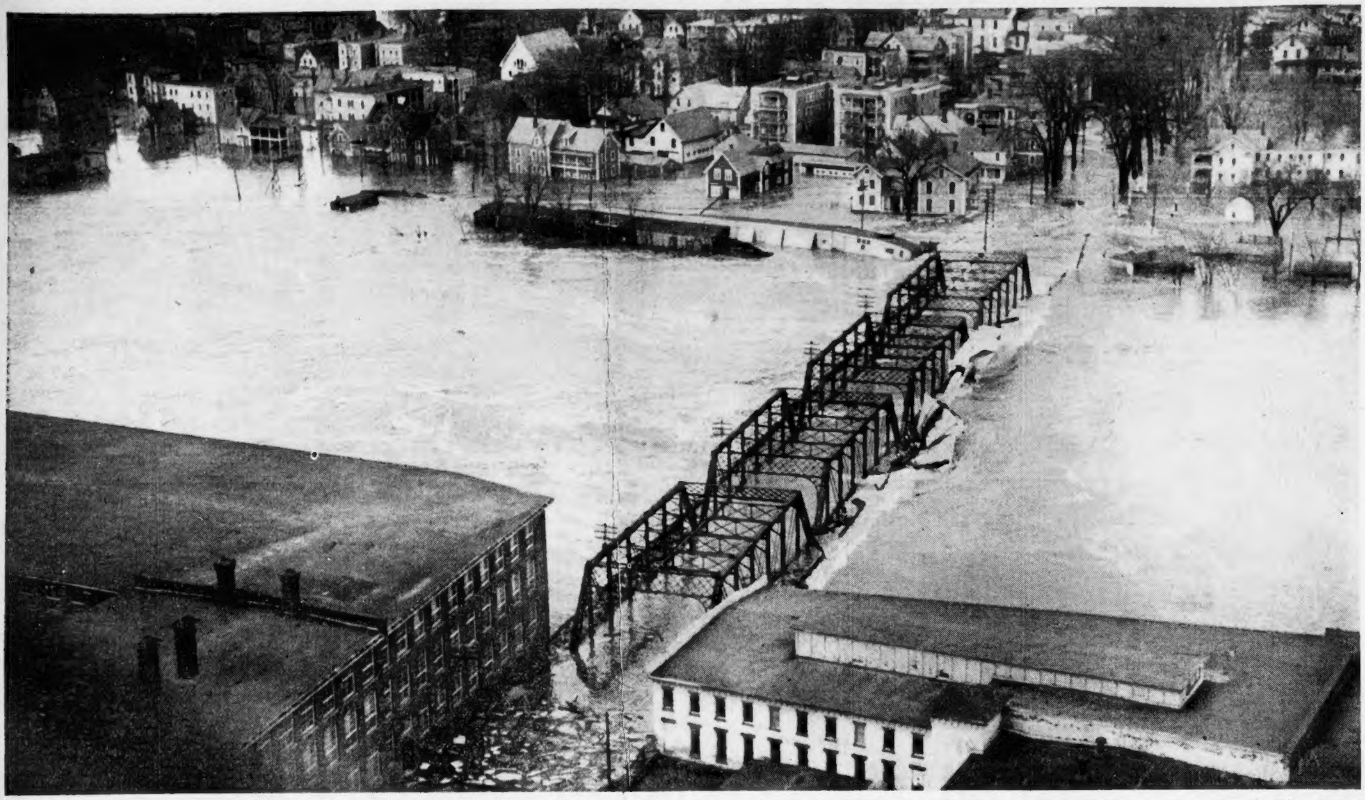
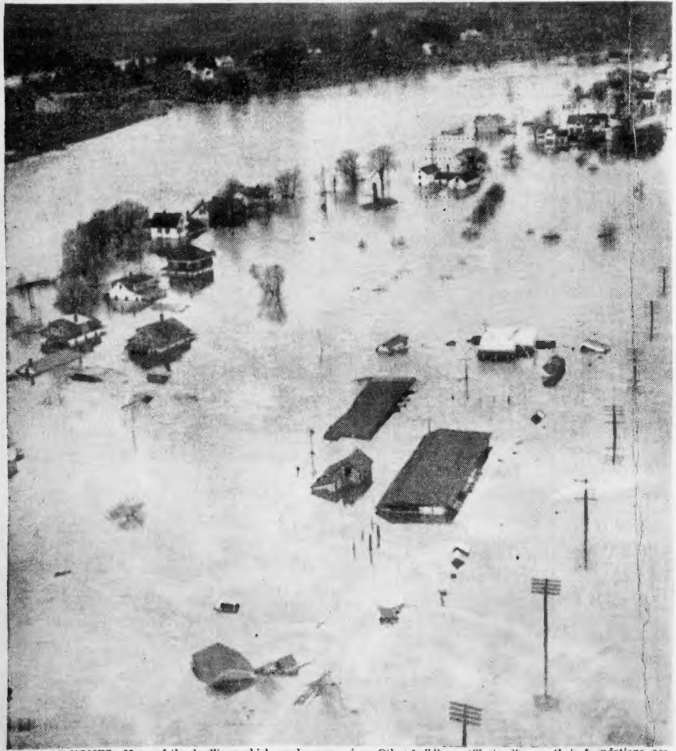
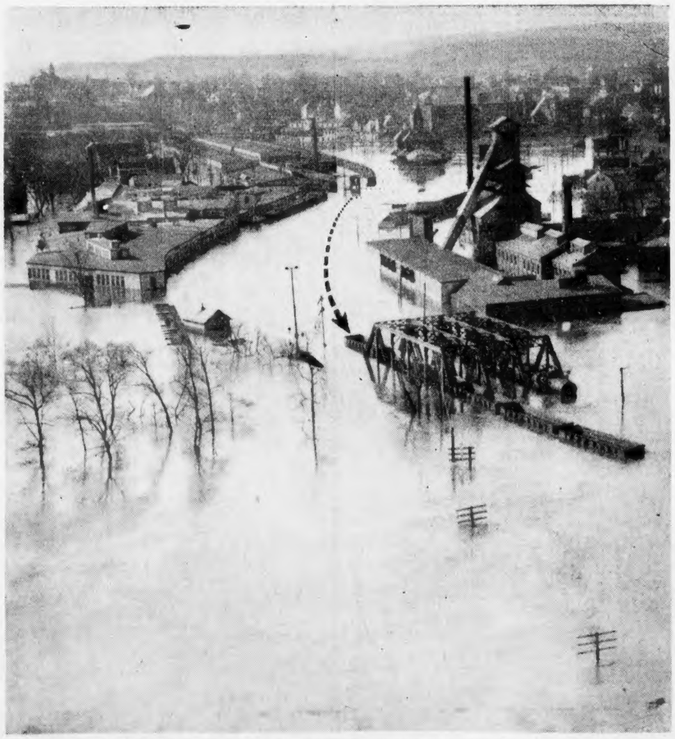
FLOOD-SURGING MERRIMACK SWEEPS ALL BEFORE IT



"TREMBLING LIKE A LEAF"—Thus did the aerial photographer describe this bridge across the Merrimack at Manchester when he flew over it to obtain this striking "shot." The flood waters can be seen pouring into the residential section of the city. This is situated below the great Amoskeag dam, which it is feared may go at any time. Should the dam burst this bridge would be torn from its moorings in a matter of seconds once the great wall of water bore down upon it. Desperate attempts are being made to save the dam, but the danger mounts hourly. Already, as may be seen from the picture, the flood peril is greater than that ever experienced before in the history of the city. .



A SEA OF HOMES—Many of the dwellings which can be seen in this aerial picture taken over Tyngsboro are in reality floating down in the sweeping current of the raging Merrimack river. Other buildings still standing on their foundations, are either nearly inundated or weakening under the terrific pressure of the water.



THERE GOES A BRIDGE—Here is a dramatic action photograph of a bridge being swept away from its moorings by the fury of the Merrimack flood waters at Nashua, N. H. Dotted lines show the path of the bridge from its foundations. Notice the railroad cars, still on the bridge, which were placed there as ballast in the hope of strengthening the structure.

All pictures on this page were made by Eddie Stephan, Boston Evening American "flying photographer," from Inter-City Airway's plane piloted by Charles Sutherland.

SCORES BATTLE FLOOD PERIL; THOUSANDS HOMELESS

Massachusetts' death toll had risen to four today and property losses continued to mount as raging floods gripped the state for still another day.

While the strain eased slightly at Springfield and Holyoke and other communities along the Connecticut valley, cities and towns in the Merrimack valley were in a worse plight than yesterday.

Industry and business in Lawrence, Lowell and Haverhill were virtually at a standstill, with the Merrimack River raging entirely out of control.

Should the dam of the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company, across the state line at Manchester, N. H., succumb under the poundings of the flood waters, virtual ruin of the Merrimack Valley communities in Massachusetts is feared.

50,000 HOMELESS

Every public agency, city, state and federal, was exerting every effort and energy toward relieving conditions for 50,000 homeless in the Commonwealth and 50,000 out of work through the closing of about 100 factories and stores.

So serious was the situation in Haverhill that Adjutant-General William I. Rose of the national guard and his staff concentrated activities in that city, establishing their base of operations there.

While the fire alarm system was still in working order today, the gongs were not. Several fire stations have been abandoned because of the floods and Legionnaires and volunteers have been posted at each alarm box to prevent false alarms being sounded.

ALL BRIDGES SHUT

All bridges have been closed, with coast guards and naval reserve members guarding the approaches.

A special legislative committee considered Governor Curley's appeal for a huge bond issue to finance rehabilitation work, while the Metropolitan chapter of the Red Cross awaited contributions to a $75,000 relief fund requested from Washington.

Army, navy, coast guard, national guard — in fact every organized group—had their job assigned in the greatest mass effort in Massachusetts since war times.

MANHOLE BLOWS UP

Power lines of the Haverhill Electric Company and the Kennedy Power Company went out today, plunging Haverhill in darkness and leaving without power those industries which still had been operating.

Further danger was added when water seeped into gas mains, causing blasts which set manhole covers soaring into the air.

The Groveland bridge draw was forced halfway open by a mass of logs and debris pounding against it. It was expected to go out.

Postal officials announced that all Haverhill mail would be handled at Bradford because the local structure was uninhabitable.

Building officials declared that present property damage is more than $100,000. They said that many business structures will later be condemned because of flood ravages.

Two men narrowly escaped drowning during the early morning hours. Charles Gardella was rescued by a police officer when he slipped off the steps of his home into deep water. Neal Penwell, 35, was swept off his feet by the current as he left his work at a Merrimack street theater. A fellow worker rescued him.

LAWRENCE NEAR PANIC

At Lawrence, near panic gripped the residents as reports from New Hampshire indicated that the Amoskeag dam at Manchester was nearing the collapse point, while the Merrimack at Lawrence was already two feet above record levels.

Water was six feet deep in the business district, and in Essex street employes of the Arlington Trust Company threw up sandbag emplacements to protect steel vaults.

Presses in the basement of the Lawrence Telegram-Sun were dismantled and removed.

On the water front, a corps of WPA workers labored all night to prevent pollution of the municipal water supply as the Merrimack swept over the city filter beds and threatened to reach the water pumps. These have been raised eight feet.

LOWELL'S SORRY PLIGHT

Two of Lawrence's three bridges have been closed to traffic, with the river nearly seven feet higher than the previous record set in 1896. Nearly a foot of rise took place in four hours today.

Although weighted with loaded freight cars as ballast, the Boston & Maine trestle was threatening to go out momentarily as logs, portions of wrecked bridges and other debris hammered at the foundations.

With a fourth of Lowell under water and more than 4000 persons homeless there, the city presented a sorry picture today. Water height records had been smashed, power lines had been broken and the city, first in the Massachusetts path of the threatened new water avalanche from Manchester, was virtually under martial law.

Maddened waters were gouging at supports of Aiken Bridge, and if this goes out it is feared nothing can save the Central Bridge. Its loss would cut off 35,000 persons from the rest of the city.

In the State Armory and public schools, more than 600 refugees are being cared for by the Red Cross, and hundreds of others have been given refuge in private homes.

SHOOT TO KILL ORDER

At Springfield, while the tension had slackened somewhat, there were still 20,000 homeless. West Springfield was isolated and Agawam, Chicopee and Longmeadow were seriously affected.

Under Colonel Alexander McDonald, a detail of 800 National Guards received orders to "shoot to kill" anyone caught looting in the flooded districts.

Hundreds of city employes and volunteers were waging a battle against nature's forces at the buttress of the Holyoke dam, where already more than 68,000 sandbags have been placed in a barrier 22 feet high, but the creeping waters are only a few feet from the top.

CARE FOR REFUGEES

Refugees are being sheltered in the Holyoke City and Hall auditorium, but food is available only for a few days.

North Adams today began work of repairing its shattered waterfront district as the Hoosac River returned to the confines of its bed. The hillside which was ground loose to engulf several homes and a garage was still mobile and national guards were posted to keep the curious away.

Greenfield reported that the Connecticut was receding, but a food shortage threatened.

Spring Floats In On Flood's Crest

Odd note in the flood situation in New England today was the scheduled arrival of spring at 1:58 p. m. At that hour King Winter was due to bow out of the picture and make way for the first day of spring.

THIS NATURAL FOOD GENTLY REGULATES YOUR SYSTEM

Furnishes Needed "Bulk" for Regular Habits

Your doctor will tell you that keeping healthy depends far more on proper diet than on drugs, that common constipation is usually due to insufficient "bulk" in meals, and that patent medicines give you only temporary relief.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN supplies gently acting "bulk" which corrects the cause of common constipation.* This "bulk" takes up moisture, forming a soft mass which helps to cleanse the system.

ALL-BRAN gives your body the regular internal exercise it needs to prevent sluggishness. ALL-BRAN also furnishes vitamin B and iron.

Studies on normal men and women have shown that this delicious cereal is perfectly satisfactory. Serve ALL-BRAN regularly for regularity, with milk or cream—or use in cooking.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Consult your doctor if you do not gain relief this way. ALL-BRAN is much more effective than part-bran products. Get ALL-BRAN at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

N. H. BATTLES MERRIMACK'S FURY; THOUSANDS IN NEED

On the ability of the huge Amoskeag Dam at Manchester, N. H., to resist the incessant pounding of flood waters, the fate of that section of New Hampshire and of Massachusetts cities and towns in the Merrimack Valley rested today.

Already tremendous destruction and suffering have resulted from the floods, with thousands made homeless and thousands thrown out of work through the enforced closing of industrial plants and business houses.

With redoubled force, the furious Merrimack river cannonaded along uncharted courses today and dams and bridges still untoppled by the onslaught of the tumbling waters were taxed to the limit of their strength.

At the Amoskeag dam more than 500 men were battling in an attempt to save the water barrier from breaking and releasing a torrential wall to crush out everything in its path.

THOUSANDS OF HOMELESS

A new menace occurred when two fuel tanks of 1,000,000-gallon capacity, torn loose from their foundations on a river island, swept downstream and crashed into the Granite street bridge at Manchester.

The added strain of the pounding tanks was expected to tear out the bridge, already under five feet of water.

In headquarters of three Legion posts of the city alone more than 2000 homeless were being cared for by the Red Cross.

Highway authorities estimated flood waters have done $3,000,000 damage to roads.

Seven feet of water covered railroad tracks near Manchester, and officials said that it might be 10 days before trains can resume service, due to the necessity for replacing twisted or missing rails and re-ballasting washed-out roadbeds.

BRIDGE IS CLOSED

The last means of exit from Manchester to Concord was closed this afternoon when passage over the Amoskeag bridge, crossing the Merrimack above the dam, was barred because of the bridge's unsafe condition.

With the Merrimack due to reach its crest some time tonight, according to engineers, the fate of Manchester, Lowell, Lawrence and Haverhill hangs on the stamina of Amoskeag Dam, just north of Manchester.

Fourteen feet of water was racing over the flashboards of the dam today—half a foot more than the previous all-time high mark reached in the flood of 1887. Scores of WPA workers made desperate attempts to stem the torrent with sandbags.

Hundreds were homeless in Manchester and 35,000 residents of the West Side were cut off from all communication with the city proper.

NATIONAL GUARD AIDS

National Guardsmen aided in rescue work and policed business areas in Manchester, Keene, Concord, Franklin, Nashua and Berlin.

Governor H. Styles Brides remained at the capitol in Concord throughout the night directing relief.

Damage to industrial plants and highways in Keene was totaled at more than $250,000. Two hundred persons were desperately in need of clothing. Churches were equipped with beds, cots and mattresses.

Concord had no gas or electric service. Sewalls Falls dam, north of the city was under fifteen feet of water and near collapse.

Houses, churches and stores were swept from their foundations in Hooksett, a few miles above Manchester on the Merrimack.

At Plymouth, where the Daniel Webster highway was buried under twenty-one feet of water 300 persons fled their homes. Yards of the Boston and Maine and Maine Central railroads were inundated, with 1500 freight cars surrounded and 200 others covered.

A gigantic log jam in the Ashuelot river, at the bridge of the New England Box Company just above Winchester, constituted a menace existing in no other part of the state. Weakened by the pounding of 1,000,000 square feet of bobbing lumber, the trembling structure seemed on the verge of collapse.

Worst of R. I. Flood Over; Mills Are Being Reopened

For the first time in 10 days of flood conditions, the threat of further destruction in Rhode Island lessened today, with flood waters receding in the Blackstone and Pawtuxet valleys.

Units of the Rhode Island National Guard, rushed yesterday to Warwock when rising water forced families to flee, were released from duty, and residents in some sections returned to their homes.

Several mills resumed operations, including the Riverpoint Lace Works in Lippitt, where a dam burst yesterday, sending an avalanche of water down the Pawtuxet river.

In nine hours the Blackstone river gauge had dropped 17 inches at Woonsocket, engineers reported, but mills and homes are still flooded

State highway engineers reported some highways still covered with water in the lowland sections but said good detours were available. Virtually all the direct roads, however, are impassable

In Pawtucket, the water was still lapping at the new $500,000 City Hall, but the peak of the flood conditions apparently had been passed.

That city also reported several mill had reopened and others plan to reopen on Monday.

CITY OF HARTFORD HARD HIT, 20 BLOCKS UNDER WATER

Hartford bore the brunt of the swollen Connecticut River's surge to a new flood level in lower New England today with its power and telephone service paralyzed and most of the city's industrial and business section submerged and crippled.

Raging down the valley into Connecticut after laying a trail of death and devastation in Massachusetts communities, the river rose early today to more than 36 feet at Hartford with no indication that it had approached its peak.

At 5 a. m. today the whirling waters smashed through the huge dike built to protect the Brainard Field airport and south meadows and inundated that entire area under many feet of water.

More than a dozen persons, reluctant to leave their meadow homes, were trapped by the bursting of the dike and scurried to inadequate protection high in the branches of trees.

Police were manning boats to try to rescue them shortly after dawn.

Other meadow residents had been rushed to Hartford Hospital for treatment for immersion and injuries suffered as the waters whirled through the breach in the dike and swept over the many acres of meadows.

Two men were seen to fall into the river as their boat overturned. An East Hartford boy was also reported missing from home early today.

More than 20 blocks of streets in the city's east side were flooded with many feet of water. National Guardsmen and police were busy until the early morning hours evacuating residents from the stricken area.

The north meadows section of the city was entirely evacuated early yesterday before the flood waters soared to their present record, seven feet above the all-time high established in 1927.

Power and telephone companies struggled to maintain service but gave up the fight at midnight after the South meadows power station was flooded partially by the rising waters.

Hartford's downtown section was plunged into darkness early last night and every available police officer and national guardsman was placed on duty to prevent looting and other crime.

Hundreds of employes of the city's many insurance companies were unable to leave for their homes outside the city when rail service to the north and transportation across the river was wiped out.

Hotels were without lights and pressed candles into service in dining rooms and guest rooms. Patrons of the Bond Hotel were forced to climb stairways as high as 10 stories when the power shutoff ended elevator service.

Telephone service was maintained but intermittently with emergency calls being given preference. At dawn today, the Boston Evening American talked with the chief operator, but was forced to limit the conversation to one-minute talks with intervals of three or more minutes between them.

Seventeen miles from Hartford the bridge from Middletown to Portland was closed as water surged to within a few feet of its floooring.

Only two bridges are now passable across the Connecticut, those at Haddam and Saybrook.

Other bridges are still standing but are closed to traffic.

They are also threatened by huge oil tanks, which broke from their moorings at Hartford and are reported whirling down the river.

At Hartford it was said that at least 15,000 had been driven from their homes, many of which were swept away or damaged beyond repair.

OHIOANS CALM; CREST NEARS

(Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press)

Marietta, O., March 20 (AP)—Near-crest waters of the upper Ohio rivel valley's worst flood in history churned through this pioneer' Ohio city today but fell far short of records set here in 1913.

Eight to ten feet of water covered all of the business district, forced Marietta College to close and inundated scores of lowland residential homes.

Devastating waters that left more than 10,000 homeless and caused damage unofficially estimated at upwards of $10,000,000 in the industrially-rich upper valley, met apparently adequate flood protection measures in this agricultural region.

Residents south of here on both sides of the river to Huntington, W. Va., and Ironton and Portsmouth, Ohio, warned of the 17 or more deaths in the Wheeling-Martins Ferry district, called a virtual holiday and sat down to wait out the rebellious water. They are veterans of many river outbreaks.

The specter of disease hung over Wheeling Island and Steubenville. Physicians and health authorities worked untiringly to inoculate thousands against typhoid fever.

MAINE LOSS $25,000,000; BRANN ASKS U. S. AID

Lewiston, Me., March 20—Maine's flood damage was placed "in excess of $25,000,000" today by Governor Louis J. Brann when he arrived here from Augusta in the course of a personal survey.

"The highway department reported to me this morning that at least 100 bridges are gone, including four major structures at Richmond, Thompson, Waterville and Rumford.

"I have wired President Roosevelt that I will be in Washington, Monday morning, to ask Federal funds for reconstruction of bridges and highways.

CALL OUT TROOPS

"At the present moment Rumfort appears to be in the worst plight. I managed to get through to this city from Augusta after some difficulty and am now heading for Rumford.

"I have issued a blanket order to Mayors and Selectment to call out the National Guard in all cases where they believe local conditions warrant it. Guardsmen are on duty at Waterville, Rumford, Skowhegan and Saco and are right no wbeing called to duty here in Lewiston.

"Approximately 300 flood refugees are housed in the Armory at Biddeford and similar conditions prevail at Rumford."

Rumford is under martial law.

The business district along the waterfront here in Lewiston has been roped off and the stores are closed.

WATER, MILK FAMINE

Maine flood conditions are worse than ever before in the state long history, according to officials. The state is in the tenth day of its flood siege. Two deaths have been recorded.

Loosed waters have driven thousands from their homes, left many communities lightless and brought all through railtransportation to a standstill.

Many sections reported a shortage of milk and a threatened drinking water famine.

The raging Androscoggin is at its highest stage isolating Rumford, where milk is being doled only to babies. The Twin-Cities, Lewiston and Auburn, are cut off from each other.

RAIL SPAN MENACED

Lights failed in Lefiston at 3 o'clock this morning, with the pumping station at the Falls flooded to a depth of two feet.

The three highway bridges were closed with a muddy torrent lapping at their floorboards.

The 750-foot Maine Central Railroad bridge above the falls, only through rail line left open as a result of the washouts at Augusta, was weighted down by a trainload of crushed stone. It is impassable.

It was feared a break of the ice and a 30,000-cord log jam up the river would take the bridge out.

The river seeped into an Oak Hill Cemetery tomb in Auburn and 15 bodies were removed.

Joseph Demers, 96 years old and blind, was rescued in a rowboat from his Lewiston home.

SWIFT CO. GIFT AIDS RELIEF

Setting an example for other business interests, Swift and Company, national meat packing concern, today donated the sum of $10,000 for the relief of flood sufferers throughout New England.

Of this amount $4000 has been given to the American Red Cross.

The remaining $6000 has been divided between the five states most seriously affected by the worst floods in the history of this section of the country.

Governor Curley is in receipt of a check for $2000 for the benefit of Massachusetts victims.

Each of the governors of four other states, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Connecticut received $1000.

All checks were made payable to the governors personally to be used as they best saw fit in the relief work.

The Red Cross announced that their share of the money would be put to use immediately in establishing living quarters for the thousands made homeless.

Other national and regional concerns doing business in New England are expected to follow the lead set by Swift and Company.

Bridge Collapse Report False

Pittsburgh, March 20 (AP)—A false police report that the crowded Sixteenth street bridge had collapsed threw Pittsburgh into a short panic today.

Associated Press reporters who reached the bridge found it safe, with traffic moving over it.

Willed $20,000 by Widow

Bequest of $20,000 was left to Percy Read, a member of her household, under the terms of the will of Mrs. Elsie F. Loeffler of Medfield, filed for probate in Dedham court.

Auto Governors' Bill Is Defeated

Refusing substitution for an adverse report, the State Senate defeated a bill of Senator Thomas X. Burke of Dorchester to require the installation of governors on autos to limit their speed to 50 miles

Early Radio Wins Divorce

Salem, March 20—Her husband's asserted insistence on playing their radio until early hours of the morning while she sought to sleep won a divorce for Mrs. Catherine C. Palonis, Dorchester.

GIFFORD CALLS RACING WIRES 'LAW PROBLEM'

Washington, March 20 (I.N.S.)—Provision of telephone equipment to operators of a country-wide horse-race betting syndicate was branded "messy and undesirable business" by Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Taking the stand before the federal communications commission in the inquiry ordered by Congress to sift the financial operations of the Bell System, Gifford expressed amazement at earlier testimony showing company attorneys had aided gamblers. He said:

"We certainly don't want this type of business. We don't want to deal with people who are breaking the law. We want very sincerely to get rid of this character of service, but, frankly, we don't know how to do it.

"It seems to be a problem that rests with the law enforcement officials."

Called as a surprise witness, John D. Hartigan, attorney general of Rhode Island, said it was absurd for telephone officials to profess ignorance of the use to which their equipment was being put when they installed as many as 13 telephones and other equipment in attics and cellars from which the leaders of the gambling racket operated."

German Asks Army Call Release

Eugenor Rudolf Ohle, a pre-medical sophomore at Harvard who was born in Germany in 1914, today told the Boston Evening American that he had asked exemption from Nazi military service.

Herr Ohle, in this country less than a year, said he had reported to Baron von Tippelskirch, German consul general in Boston, following the latter's statement that all Germans here born in 1914, 1915 or 1916 must report for compulsory military service in Hitler's army.

Interviewed at Harvard, Ohle said:

"I am still a German, but I feel more allegiance now to the United States than to Germany.

"I do not want to waste a year in Germany. The army there does not need me. I hope to become a citizen in America.

"I think I will be excused from service. If there should be any stress, I cannot say just what course I would take."

Appealing a six-month jail sentence for assault and battery in connection with the garment strike, Louis Epstein, W[illegible] street, Dorchester, is being held in $500 bail today.

GERMANY BALKS AT LATEST LEAGUE PLAN FOR PEACE

Berlin, March 20 (AP)—Germany's ministers subjected the London proposals for settlement of the Rhineland crisis to long discussions today after Adolf Hitler's newspaper Voelkischer Beobachter turned its criticism upon the League of Nations.

The pre[illegible] mood was [illegible] one of [illegible] at a proposal to withdraw German troops 20 [illegible] meters back from the French frontier and permit [illegible] police to patrol [illegible] pending negotiations for a final settlement.

Informed sources said, however, that it was up to Der Fuehrer alone to decide whether even the temporary [illegible] should be borne in view of prospects for an early peace conference. No one was willing to forecast Hitler's decision.

[illegible]

Informed [illegible] pointed out that [illegible] the Reich embarked on [illegible] after [illegible] of power [illegible] the nation was thoroughly [illegible] about [illegible] of all mass [illegible].

Concession action on any one point under such conditions was virtual impossible, these sources contended, because the various points were inter-dependent.

French Cabinet Hails Proposed New Locarno

Paris, March 20 (AP)—Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin carried the warm approval of France's cabinet for his London negotiations today in going to present the Locarno accord to the Chamber of Deputies as a solution to the Rhineland crisis.

The government announced that Great Britain in a letter to France which is part of the agreement will specify the following four points:

Great Britain, France and Belgium will immediately consider "measures to be taken to meet a new situation if the Reich rejects the Locarno powers proposition.

Great Britain "will immediately come to the aid of the French and Belgian governments in compliance with the Locarno Treaty with all measures considered necessary by common accord".

Great Britain, in exchange for reciprocal assurances by France, agrees to take "all practical measures in her power" to protect French and Belgian territory against unprovoked aggression".

To fulfil these agreements, the governments "will establish and continue contact between the general staffs" of the armies.

Super League Planned In Four-Power Parley

Copyright, 1936, the Associated Press.

London, March 20—A virtual Super League of Nations was disclosed by French headquarters today as the ultimate goal of a proposed international conference to be called to consider the situation arising out of Germany's march on the Rhine.

The whole accumulation of European problems arising and left over from the World War go under examination by the conference.

The French issued an agenda for the proposed parley as follows:

Organization for collective security.

More exact definition of the obligations an dapplications of Article XVI of the League covenant (dealing with sanctions);

Limitation of armaments;

Strengthening and widening economic relations and organization of financial ad economic exchange.

Examination of conditions for the return of Germany to the League of Nations and formulation of a non-aggression pact for Europe.

The Council of the League would send invitations "to the powers of the world" to attend the conference.

This would permit non-members of the League such as the United States, Japan and Brazil to send observers.

To preserve the security of the Franco-German border while a new "Locarno pact" is being worked out, the four-power proposal also would provide:

Maintenance of the status quo of the present German military forces in the Rhineland as officially announced.

Maintenance of the status quo of all military forces in the Rhineland area.

Maintenance of the status quo of fortifications.

Dispatch of some British and Italian troops to the strip of German territory 20 kilometers wide east of the French and Belgian frontiers.

Creation of an international commission supervising all measures.

Quins' Film Lures Dionnes to N. Y.

New York, March 20 (AP)—The parents of the world's most famous babies—the Dionne quintuplets—were in New York today to see their offspring perform in motion pictures.

Oliva and Elzire Dionne also will take in the sights of Gotham before returning to their home in Canada.

The quintuplets are playing here in "The Country Doctor," part of which was filmed in Callander, Ont., where the quins were born.

Mrs. Dionne, who said she had seen only three motion pictures in her entire life, remarked she was glad to have the opportunity to see for herself if her five famous daughters are really natural born actresses as she had been told.

Harry Kelly, 63, Comedian, Dies

New York, March 20 — Harry Kelly, 63, comedian whose stage career of half a century included appearances in productions from "Peck's Bad Boy" to several editions of the Ziegfeld Follies and of "Artists and Models," is dead here. He had been ill for nine days with a heart ailment.

MRS. BANNISTER TELLS OWN STORY OF 'HOAX' DRAMA

By WIN BROOKS

Boston Evening American Staff Writer

Dorchester, N. B., March 20—May Bannister told her own story today, cleared by a jury of the wilderness waif kidnaping, convicted of harboring little Betty Lake.

But before she talked [illegible] and clasped in her [illegible] year-old son, Arthur [illegible] of murdering the [illegible] doomed to hang.

Mother and son already [illegible] the fantastic [illegible] mystery had a dramatic [illegible] in the jail where both [illegible] tence and where 21 [illegible] Bannister awaits [illegible]

It was their [illegible] January 6, the [illegible] his wife and [illegible] murdered in [illegible] Arthur was [illegible] haps their [illegible] Canadian [illegible] youth to [illegible] no other [illegible] Mrs. Bannister [illegible] pletely. Her [illegible] her.

"Forget what's past and think of the future," said the boy who has no future.

Denies Charge

Later voicing her first [illegible] denial of the [illegible] Crown charge that she sent her [illegible] daughter, Frances, to [illegible] the Lake baby, she said:

"I don't know where they went that night. They went out with Albert Powell and Jim Sargent many nights and stayed late.

"I thought Frances was out with Powell and had taken Daniel with her. All them lies that were told, the girls were going to run away if Powell kept coming to the house. I had to tell him to get. I was away most all the time and couldn't look after the children right.

"Powell brought food, wouldn't anyone bring food if he came and stayed from Saturday afternoon till Monday morning?"

Regarding the "mystery" letter which Powell [illegible] the witness stand she sent to him, Mrs. Bannister said:

"I never sent him any letter. Frances sent him a note by one of the boys one time telling him to stay away. That's all there was in that letter.

"I told him he was just a wolf in sheep's clothing trying to destroy my children. About my housekeeping for Milton Trites. It was practically our whole living. He gave the boys work. It was kind of give and take."

[illegible] after [illegible] found her [illegible] of having [illegible] taken [illegible] which [illegible] her to [illegible]

Surprise Visit

In a [illegible] house dress she was combing her hair in front of a [illegible] mirror in her cell room when Sheriff Isaac Newton K[illegible]am appeared.

In some manner she had learned that her 13-year-old daughter Marie had been brought here for [illegible] as a Crown witness. [illegible] said to the sheriff:

"Oh, they won't let me see Marie. If only I could have seen Marie, if only I could see the children."

[illegible] on the [illegible] she saw [illegible] walk in with Arthur. She turned with a [illegible] clasped her son in her arms [illegible] began to weep.

"Ma, I'm going to take a bath," said the doomed boy, by way of a joke. "How's Daniel," she asked. "What's Daniel doing?"

"Oh, he's all right, Ma. He's just fine."

[illegible] down together on her [illegible] arm around her, [illegible] she said:

"Oh, Arthur, mother didn't know you were there that night. Arthur, do you know what they're going to do with you?

"Oh, Arthur, if I could only go in your place."

[illegible] face was white.

"Take it easy, Ma, take it easy," he said. "You be brave, you know this goes to another court."

She turned to the sheriff.

"Can't you do nothing for my children?"

"Listen, Ma," said Arthur. "Stop crying, Ma."

She [illegible] to cry. She looked down at his feet, [illegible]

"Do you wear them rubbers in this hot building all the time? You told me you was coming back that night. You never came."

He [illegible]

"Don't talk about the past. Think of the future," he said. "How did your trial come out, Ma?"

The sheriff explained there were [illegible] was found [illegible] the [illegible] through with this in [illegible] two years.

Mrs. Dorothy Sherwood, former showgirl condemned for the drowning of her child in Newburgh, showed no interest in styles.

GOODWIN QUITS UNION POST

Because of the activities of Communists seeking control of the Brotherhood of Allied Craftsmen, a Brockton shoe trades union, Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin resigned today as advisor to the union.

In a letter to the general board Goodwin said [illegible] must choose between him and Communistic influences that have been gradually creeping into the Brotherhood, in spite of my efforts and the efforts of the majority.

He had been advisor for three years, continuing in that capacity after becoming registrar in spite of demands by rival unions that he quit [illegible] if he was going to remain a state official.

Dillinger Betrayer To Appeal Verdict

Chicago, March 20 (AP)—Mrs. Anna Sage, the "woman in red" who accompanied John Dillinger to his rendezvous with death, today contemplated an appeal to the United States supreme court in her fight against deportation.

Yesterday the United States appeals court affirmed her [illegible]

Mrs. Sage [illegible] Dillinger into a ring of federal agents [illegible] North [illegible] theater on July 22, 1934. She contended that she had been promised dismissal of her deportation case by Melvin Purvis, then head of the Chicago United States bureau of investigation.

6500 WPA JOBS TO GO, SAYS MANSFIELD

A cut of 6500 workers in WPA ranks in Boston will be made within the next two months Mayor Mansfield told the Eastern Regional Conference of Mayors today at Faneuil Hall.

According to the Mayor, who was the first speaker at the opening session of the two-day conference, 3000 workers will be dropped in the next 10 days.

"The Federal government has just instructed Colonel Thomas F. Sullivan, Boston WPA director," said Mansfield, "to reduce the number of WPA employes in the city to 19,226, a cut of 6500 from the present WPA payroll.

WANTS INCREASE

"Three thousand of the workers must go in 10 days and the remainder before June 30.

"The theory is that they will be absorbed by the PWA. They probably will be eventually, but it will probably be long before they are absorbed, and in the meantime, the Boston taxpayers must bear the burden of providing for their families."

Mayor Mansfield declared that Federal relief should be increased in Massachusetts, instead of slashing the number of employes on WPA rolls.

It was expected that a resolution protesting against any slackening of Federal relief would be passed by the conference before it ends tomorrow.

Mayor J. Fred Manning, of Lynn, made a vigorous attack on Harry J. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, on the operation of the federal relief system.

CRITICIZES HOPKINS

"Those who say there is no politics in the set-up of federal relief don't know what they are talking about. It is full of politics. It has been my experience that if you don't fit, you don't get in."

Manning criticized Hopkins for denying direct federal relief for Massachusetts.

$500 Cash, Gems Vanish With Boy

Police of the Fields Corner station this afternoon are hunting for a boy about 16 years old who is alleged to have stolen a pocketbook containing two diamond rings and $400 in bills from the grocery store of Mrs. Margaret Sanulian of 49 Geneva avenue, Dorchester, after he had delivered a case of milk.

The boy was helping the [illegible] driver make his daily deliveries. Police know the identity of the [illegible]

Mrs. Sanulian told police that she missed the pocketbook as soon as the boy left the store. It was [illegible] under the counter near the milk [illegible]

She described the boy as being about 16 years old, dark complexion, stocky build, wearing a blue sweater and bare-headed.

"Office Wife" Tragedy

'Ice-Box Blonde' To Bare Story

VERA STRETZ PUT ON TRIAL

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN

International News Service Staff Correspondent

New York, March 20—Vera Stretz, a serene-faced blonde of 31, was placed on trial in the Criminal Courts building today for the murder of Dr. Fritz Gebhardt, wealthy middle-aged German importer, whom she shot to death in his fashionable apartment in the Beekman Towers during the early hours of the morning of last November 12.

Miss Stretz, very pale, was escorted into the court room by a policeman at 10:15 a. m., a few minutes after Assistant District Attorney Miles O'Brien had announced "The people are ready."

Vera's lawyer was Samuel Leibowitz, who [illegible] played a spectacular [illegible] in the Lindbergh case [illegible] Bruno Richard [illegible] unsuccessful [illegible] Hauptmann to [illegible]

And public interest [illegible] high as society women and debutantes, stage celebrities and working girls [illegible] for seats in the courtroom to witness this modern drama of a girl who tried to mix [illegible] and business and lost.

For the first time the blonde reserved Vera will tell from the witness stand the story of her life as an office wife who shared both the business and personal life of the man she killed.

Under the [illegible] questioning of officials the [illegible] girl has refused consistently to add to her original statement, to reveal the background of love, jealousy or [illegible] which [illegible] her to fire four well-aimed shots into the [illegible] body of the wealthy German. She has said only:

"I can't help thinking that any decent woman would have done what I did."

To Tell Own Story

Samuel Leibowitz, her lawyer, has refused to reveal the plans of the defense other than his intention to let Miss Stretz tell her own story from the witness stand.

Today Vera was reported "tense" and nervous in her cell at the Women's House of Detention, dreading the ordeal of baring the details of her private life to an avid public.

It is this distaste for public display which has kept her lips so tightly locked since the violent night five months ago when she faced a brass-buttoned police lieutenant in a hallway of Beekman Towers, a still-warm revolver in her hand and confessed briefly that she had killed the man she loved.

VERA STRETZ

"Yes, I Killed Him!"

Vera and Dr. Gebhardt met on a West Indies cruise a year earlier, when each apparently decided it was a case of love at first sight.

When they returned, Vera was employed as a $10-a-week secretary by Dr. Gebhardt in the New York office of his importing firm, and was installed in an apartment in the same exclusive building in which he lived, on another floor.

Love Poems

The emotional nature of the girl who has been described as the "icy blonde" is revealed in the letters she wrote to her distinguished lover during his trip to Germany a few months before his death. She wrote him love poems in German, and described in tender, sensitive phrases the beauty of the East river at dawn and her loneliness for him. She wrote:

"I am so sick for you. I long for you and I know it will always be like this."

And Dr. Gebhardt replied:

"My thoughts are burned on you—your dark and deep mystery."

The letters revealed that Vera knew of Dr. Gebhardt's wife and two children in Germany, but that she also planned a life with him.

Today Vera places her fate in the hands of 12 men, who must decide whether a woman can be justified in taking the law into her own hands.

Thief Robs Police Of Cruising Car

Police of Warren avenue station have a real mystery on their hands. Between 4 and 5 o'clock this morning somebody entered the police garage in Berkeley street and stole a police cruising car. It's a sedan bearing the Massachusetts registration number 94158.

The machine was stolen while the garage attendants were out to breakfast.

It was the first time in the history of the Boston police department that an automobile has been stolen from a police station garage.

Dean Franklin will discuss "The Art of Conversation."

Law to Deport Criminal Aliens

Washington, March 20 (US)—Yielding to public demands, the Senate immigration committee has decided to write a new and drastic law to compel the deportation of criminal aliens, it was learned.

Agreement on five forceful amendments to the pending Kerr-Coolidge deportation bill was reached at a private session.

Car Tag Involves Woman in Crash

Trapped, police said, by a radiator emblem found near a firebox that had been demolished by an auto, Mrs. Bessie Dickinson, 24, of Jackson street, Lynn, faces arraignment in Lynn court today on motor vehicle charges.

Theft Charged

Charged with theft of $1350 in antiques and furnishings from the home of Arthur Inman, Billings lane, Jamaica Plain, Thomas Atkinson, 35, Cortes street, South End, faces arraignment in West Roxbury court today.

REVERE OFFICER HIT BY AUTO

While going to the assistance of four women stalled in a car on the International highway, Patrolman Henry L. McKinley of the Revere police department was struck down and severely injured by an automobile operated by an alleged drunken driver.

McKinley and a fellow officer, John J. Roach, in a police cruising car, were driving up the dark highway connecting Malden and Revere when they got the radio report of four women in the stalled car.

When they reached the disabled car, McKinley got out and as he ran up the embankment Roach observed another automobile careening seemingly without direction up the embankment, knock down his brother officer.

The driver, arrested on a charge of operating a car while under the influence of liquor, gave the name John Connelly, 23, of Essex street, Melrose.

He and his companion, who fled from the scene but later discovered by police to be the owner of the car, are scheduled to appear in Chelsea district court today.

Patrolman McKinley, treated by Dr. Edward Rosen at Revere police station for lacerations of the face and legs and back injuries, was later taken to his home.

Texas Blast Kills 3

Texarkana, Tex., March 20 (AP)—Three persons were killed today when an explosion, followed by fire, wrecked six business concerns in the Sandflat business district here causing a loss estimated at $75,000.

MAN, 64, SPINAL PLAGUE VICTIM

Another death was recorded today in the outbreak of spinal meningitis here, and the daughter of a Boston police lieutenant was in a dangerous condition at Boston City Hospital.

William S. Grosse, 64, died at Long Island Hospital, the 16th victim at the institution.

Miss Mary Gaffney, 21, daughter of Police Lieutenant William Gaffney, is in a serious condition at city hospital. Her name is on the danger list.

Lieutenant Gaffney, his wife and a son are isolated at their home by health authorities and inspections of their health will be made for the next two weeks.

Naval Conference To End Next Week

London, March 20 (AP)—The International Naval Conference is to end next week when a new treaty will be signed.

Following the signature, probably Tuesday or Wednesday, the United States delegation will sail for home Thursday.

Closes Liquor Stores

Harrisburg, March 20 (AP)—There will be no excessive conviviality in Pennsylvania until the flood situation eases. Governor George H. Earle ordered all state liquor stores to close during the emergency.

HAGOOD TO HOLD PARLEY WITH PRESIDENT

Washington, March 20 (US)—President Roosevelt has disclosed he will hold a special conference on board his Florida-bound train today with Major-General Johnson Hagood, recently relieved of his command because of his criticism of federal relief policies.

It was explained at the White House that the conference was arranged in compliance with a request indirectly expressed to the President.

Roosevelt, who had been severely criticized for Hagood's demotion, notified the War Department to advise the general that he would be willing to talk to him on board the train.

Because the President's trip was deferred until today, it was arranged for Hagood to meet the train at some point south of Richmond, Va., this afternoon and ride with the President to the general's home at Charleston, S. C. Hagood had gone from Charleston to meet the train but turned north when advised of the change of plans.

Hagood, commanding general of the 8th Corps Area, San Antonio, Tex., aroused the administration's ire by his testimony before a congressional committee in which he accused Works Program Administration of wasting money on useless projects. Shortly thereafter Hagood was removed from his command in an order headed "by direction of the President."

Speculation was that the President and General Hagood would reach some agreement which would result in the restoration of the general's command with the possibility that he might make some apology for his criticism of a federal department outside of his jurisdiction.

Opening Gun in Ohio

Borah Denies He'll Bolt G.O.P.

Youngstown, O., March 20 (US)—Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, 70-year-old veteran of many hard-fought political battles, in the opening gun of his presidential campaign for Ohio's 52 delegates to the Republican convention declared he is "the only man running for President, who has any chance of nomination, who never bolted the Republican ticket."

Two thousand Republicans from northeastern Ohio heard the fiery senator vehemently deny opposition charges that he would bolt the Republican party and support President Roosevelt for re-election if he fails to win the G. O. P. presidential nomination.

Borah came to Ohio to begin his fight to wrest the state's G. O. P. delegates away from the "favorite" son candidate Robert Taft of Cincinnati, son of the late Chief Justice Taft, who has the backing of the regular Ohio Republican organization.

Senator Borah

Borah declared he came to Ohio because "I am a candidate for the presidency if I can secure the approval of the national convention." He added:

"Another reason for my coming to Ohio is that I am very much interested in the success of the Republican party in the coming campaign."

Assails Brown

The veteran Idahoan sharply assailed former Postmaster General Walter Brown for opposing Borah's candidacy in Ohio.

A Republican platform which would be drafted by a delegation controlled by Brown, member of President Hoover's cabinet, would not be liberal, Borah charged, adding that a delegation controlled by Brown could, therefore, not be trusted.

Borah undertook to answer rumors that his aim in trying to secure delegates to the Republican convention in Cleveland this summer is to control, at least in part, the convention and to write a platform "or have a dominating voice in the platform and secure the nomination of a desirable candidate."

His object in seeking delegates, Borah insisted, is to assume the nomination himself, if he can get it. He said:

Raps Spending

"If I can be nominated by any honorable means, I am going to take the nomination. I am going to use all honorable means to secure it.

"I desire to formulate a liberal policy for the Republican party."

Discussing at length taxation and bureaucracy Borah launched into an attack on government spending.

He blamed the government and "vast interests" for taking "40 per cent of the income of the nation" of which 20 per cent went to the government to maintain bureaus and commissions, and the other 20 per cent to the monopolies created by evasion of anti-trust laws. He declared:

"We have a tax problem in this country which is taxing people almost beyond endurance. It's taxing them out of their homes, out of their business, out of their vocation. Excessive taxation is increasing year by year.

"There is only one way to reduce taxes and that is to reduce government expenses.

"No man can run the American farms as well as the man who made the farm and lives on it.

"Every effort to lay heavy taxes on the wealthy falls upon the poorer people, those less able to pay."

Borah made it clear that he did not refer to emergency expenditures but to the tremendous growth of the normal expenses of the government. He continued:

"During the last 34 years the population increased 60 per cent and jobs on the federal payroll increased 250 per cent."

ALLSTON LEADS BLOTTO LIST AWARDS

BLOTTO, BLOTTO, everywhere and hundreds of BLOTTOS coming in with every batch of mail.

All New England has fallen for this simple fascinating inky game.

All you have to do is literally to put a blot on the family name.

Sign your name on the crease of a smooth sheet of paper. Fold the paper while the black ink is still wet so that on folding the name makes a blot. The result is a BLOTTO.

And the BLOTTO may bring you $10, the daily first prize, as it did for Mrs. Thomas Noonan, of 4 Barstow street, Allston, today's top winner.

Second prize goes to Virginia L. Cox of 13[illegible] Sycamore street, Somerville.

Ten prizes of $1 go to the following: Maud Kramer, 8 Whitney street, Nashua, N. H.; Mary Helen Steeles, 127 [illegible] avenue, East Providence, R. I.; Rena [illegible], 26 [illegible] Hill, [illegible]; Irving Cowles, 2[illegible]8 Mill street, [illegible]field; [illegible], Pawtucket, R. I.; Miss A. A. Dimock, 8 Harvard street, Exeter, N. H.; Eleanor R. Ogden, 3 Oakland street, Newburyport; Miss N. S. Batchelder, Carrabasset, Me.; Mrs. Mamie L. Austin, [illegible]; Charles B. [illegible]stock, 1[illegible] street, Worcester.

Mrs. Florence Noonan, of 4 Barstow street, Allston, made this prize-winning BLOTTO. The process is simple but the result—$10 for first honors in the contest.

The following 15 persons will each receive a pair of guest tickets for the Modern Theater, featuring Paul Muni in "The Story of Louis Pasteur," with Josephine Hutchinson, Anita Louise, Donald Woods, Fritz Leiber, and "Tango," the co-feature.

Mrs. Susan I. MacLe[illegible], [illegible] Ed[illegible]son street, Dorchester; [illegible] Spring, [illegible]; Eileen Mahoney, [illegible] street, Dorchester; Harriet [illegible] Rice, 7 Arlington [illegible]bridge; George Byrne, 110 [illegible] 8th street, South Boston; [illegible]; 31 Grieg street, Cambridge; [illegible] Robinson, 32 W. Low street, [illegible]; Harold F. DeLorey, 22 [illegible]hurst street, Dorchester; Lois L. Sands, 12 Stevenson avenue, Everett; Miss A. K. Costello, 23 Greenwood avenue, Hyde Park; Mary McLean, 57 East Springfield street, Boston; F. Dolan, 1[illegible]6 Fisher avenue, Roxbury; Edna May MacDonald, 15 Gordon street, Jamaica Plain; Miss Ellen M. Doane, 7[illegible] Jefferson street, Winthrop.

Police Fight Madman on 150-Ft. Spire

New York, March 20 (US)—A maniac, with a queer passion for ringing church bells, battled the police in the steeple of St. Joseph's Church here and fought six officers 150 feet above the street. He was not subdued until one of the policemen shot him in the leg to take the fight out of him. Half a dozen times [illegible] the officers seemed about to [illegible] to death from [illegible]. Finally overpowered, [illegible] identified as Frank M[illegible], 2[illegible]. He was [illegible] for observation.

Autopsy Ordered

Autopsy is being performed by Medical Examiner William J. Brickley today on the body of James Keeley, 19, West Third street, South Boston, found floating in the harbor.

Wives of Harvard's '11 Graduates Plan for 25th Reunion

By BETTY ALDEN

JUNE IS STILL a couple of months away, but Harvardians all over the world are already making plans to return to their Alma Mammy for their 25th reunion . . . The 25th is always the biggest and gayest of reunions . . . and so many classmates are coming and bringing their families along that it is necessary to lay elaborate plans far in advance so there will be no hitches when the 1911 graduates march into Harvard Yard to begin their four-day celebration . . .

MRS. ALEXANDER WHEELER

As a vital step in making plans for the June reunion some of the Girls of 1911 met at tea yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Alexander Wheeler on Marlborough street, to try to figure out upon whose shoulders will fall each individual and pleasant chore . . .

Mrs. Wheeler decorated her drawing rooms with a profusion of crimson carnations and white freesia and prettied up her tea table with the same color scheme to serve refreshments to her loyal 1911 guests . . . But the social phase of the gathering was incidental to the real business of the afternoon . . . Ladies who had served as chairmen of various committees at previous reunions were called in to relate their experiences and pass on words of advice to those stepping into their shoes this year . . .

Mrs. John Chapin, Mrs. Leon M. Little, Mrs. F. Reed Estabrook and Mrs. Sullivan A. Sargent, Jr., are veterans of last year's reunion who were guest speakers yesterday . . .

Their listeners included the chairmen of 1911's committees . . . Mrs. George R. Harding, executive committee . . . Mrs. Parkman D. Howe, hospitality . . . Mrs. Lothrop Withington, children . . . Mrs. Alexander Wheeler, the hostess, and chairman of the children's sports committee . . . Mrs. Edward Harding, flowers . . .

Mrs. Ralph Hornblower is taking over the job Mrs. John R. Chapin managed so well last year, the ladies' dinner, which is one of the biggest social events of the reunion . . . the ladies' entertainment committee is to be chairmaned by Mrs. Nathan Yamins . . . Mrs. Frederick Deane and Mrs. L. Cushing Goodhue are sharing the responsibilities of the transportation problems . . . Monday's social program is in the hands of Mrs. Donald F. Cutler . . . Tuesday's committee is under the supervision of Mrs. William Davies Sohier, Jr. . . . Mrs. Richard C. Floyd is chairman of the Wednesday committee, and Mrs. Arthur Beane of Thursday, the last day . . .

Scores Attend Organization Meeting

OTHER BOSTON AND NEW ENGLAND wives of 1911 who will all assist in being hostesses to other members of the class, and who were guests of Mrs. Wheeler yesterday are Mrs. John Templeton Coolidge, Jr., Mrs. Francis Cunningham, Mrs. Samuel Eliot, Mrs. Herbert Jaques, Mrs. Wayland Minot, Mrs. Russell K. Nash, Mrs. Samuel D. Robbins, Mrs. William Prescott Rogers, Mrs. Otis T. [illegible], Mrs. Robert S. Wallace, Mrs. Gluyas Williams, Mrs. William Appleton Lawrence, Mrs. Alurence L. Winship, Mrs. Homer P. Griffin and Mrs. Robert H. Holt . . .

Still others who were in on the beginning of the reunion plans are Mrs. Arthur Anderson, Mrs. Bowen Barker, Mrs. Edson A. Bemis, Mrs. Frederic M. Burnham, Mrs. Byron T. Butler, Mrs. John P. Carr, Mrs. John Davenport, Mrs. John M. Foster, Mrs. Edward Kittredge, Mrs. Francis T. Parker, Mrs. Charles R. Peck, Mrs. George [illegible], Mrs. Pliny M. Smith, Mrs. Norman Southworth, Mrs. Abbot Stevens, Mrs. L. Eugene Stover, Mrs. Edward W. [illegible], Mrs. Allan G. Waite, Mrs. William B. Webster, Jr., Mrs. F. Amedee Wells, Mrs. Prescott F. Wild, Mrs. Louis H. Parrott, Mrs. Maurice R. Bratton, Mrs. Howard A. Johnson, Mrs. Ward C. Hodgdon, Mrs. Lawrence Ilfield, Mrs. Charles L. M[illegible] and many others . . .

Restful, sunshiny Bermuda, where the Coterie meeting is being held, is an old-fashioned horse-drawn Victorian [illegible] that one often prescribed for business men who need a change from the activity of modern industry . . . Although Catherine Pentecost is not a business man, the same applies to her, for as long as she remains in Boston her waking hours are crammed full of social activities . . . She seems to be a bundle of energy for we see her on almost all our rounds . . . modeling in fashion shows, lunching and dining here, there and everywhere, getting a kick out of the hockey game and a-flying to dance at the Towne Club where we have seen her a couple of times [illegible] doing the latest steps with Eddie Fay . . .

When she sails for Bermuda on the 7th of April she will be accompanied by her two equally popular and pretty sisters, Cornelia and Mary . . . they are daughters of Captain Ernest Pentecost of Marlborough street and Topsfield . . .

Comes to Town for Opera Season

EVEN THOUGH Mrs. Francis G. Shaw has missed a lot of Beacon Hill's social events this winter by spending the whole season at her summer home in Chatham, she refuses to give up her place at the opera, so next week she is coming up to be the house guest of Mrs. Clement S. Houghton of Chestnut Hill . . .

* * *

Leslie Blake and her mother are acquiring a bit of much needed rest and relaxation in Palm Beach where they are visiting the latter's sister, Mrs. Charles L. Harding . . .

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wheatland have returned from their California vacation and spent a few days in New York last week before coming back to Topsfield . . .

* * *

Mrs. George Putnam of Milton gave a small luncheon at her hotel in New York the day before yesterday in honor of another Bostonian, Mrs. Arthur L. Derby, of Marlborough street, who was also spending a few days in Gotham . . .

DEBUTANTES OFF FOR VACATION IN SUNNY BERMUDA

MISS CAROLYN PIERCE   MISS DOROTHY MacAUSLAND

MISS CAROLYN PIERCE, daughter of Mrs. Parkman D. Pierce of Milton, and Miss Dorothy MacAusland, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Russell MacAusland of Marlborough street, snapped by the cameraman aboard the liner Queen of Bermuda just before sailing from New York with six other Boston debs to spend a vacation in sunny Bermuda. Many Bostonians are in Bermuda at the present time to enjoy the gala spring holiday season there.

Badminton Tourney

A little rain will spoil a tennis match, but even a flood cannot seriously interfere the progress of a badminton tournament.

A number of contestants coming in from Canada and other distant points were unable to circumnavigate the flooded areas in time to play in the first round of the annual New England Amateur Badminton Championships which were held on the University Club courts this afternoon.

Many Bostonians and several New Yorkers were on hand, however, and will furnish plenty of competition for the seeded players as the tournament continues through tomorrow and Sunday.

Among those who were on hand for the first elimination matches today were Mrs. Frank Richard Ford of Bay Shore, Long Island; Miss Elizabeth Greene of Hewlett, L. I.; Miss Louise Boker of New York City; Miss Doris Foote; Miss Helen Jackson; Mrs. William T. Jeones; Mrs. Whitford Painter; Miss Lena Mason; Miss Henry G. [illegible]mond; Mrs. Graham F. Winslow; Miss Mary Whittemore; Miss Elizabeth Marston; Miss Patricia Ford; Miss Fanny Little; Mrs. F. [illegible] Sears; Miss Henry W. Newberg; Miss Elizabeth Stuart; Mrs. Frank Godfrey; Mrs. Morton Smith; Mr. Tracy Mallory and Miss Elizabeth Smith.

The committee in charge of the tournament includes Mr. John W. Carnochan, chairman; Mr. William T. [illegible]; Mr. Herbert Farnsworth and Mr. Henry Newbegin. The ladies' branch of the committee includes Mrs. Harry Cutts, Mrs. F. [illegible] Brown, Mrs. William [illegible], Mrs. Frederick B. Grace and Mrs. Patricia Ford.

* * *

A NUMBER OF BOSTONIANS who are visiting in New York city will undoubtedly stay there until the flood menace has subsided and the roads are once again open to traffic. Among them are Mr. Charles S. French of Embankment Road; Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Killiam of Cambridge; Mr. Arthur F. Childs and Miss Mary D. C. Gray of Boston, and Henry M. Williams, Jr., of Cohasset, who are all staying at the Ambassador Hotel, and Mr. Walter M. Evans, who is at the St. Regis.

Proctor Grads to Meet

Mr. T. Grafton Abbott of Winchester will be one of the after-dinner speakers at the annual assembly of the Proctor Academy Association which will be held at the Commander Hotel in Cambridge this evening.

Carl B. Wetherell, formerly headmaster of the Academy, will be toastmaster and will introduce the other speakers, the Rev. Leslie T. Pennington, rector of the First Church in Cambridge; Ralston B. Daniels, president of the senior class, and Allen Chamberlain, 2d, of Lexington, undergraduate.

A one-act play will be presented by the boys of the school and the headmaster, J. Halsey Gulick, will show some colored moving pictures of the school life. Following the entertainment program there will be dancing.

Patronesses for the assembly are Mrs. Anna M. Bancroft, Mrs. Howard M. Bevers, Mrs. John P. Carr, Mrs. Francis Chamberlain, Mrs. F. S. Clement, Mrs. Gorham Dana, Mrs. George W. Danckes, Mrs. George Frost, Mrs. W. Roger Greeley, Mrs. David M. Little, Miss Lucy Lowell, Mrs. W. H. Lyon, Miss Annette F. Locke, Miss Anne L. Newhall, Mrs. Lewis I. Prouty, Mrs. Franklin F. Raymond, Mrs. G. E. Sanger, Mrs. Fannie S. Sims, Mrs. Jerome C. Smith, Miss Alice P. Tapley, Mrs. James L. Tryon, Mrs. Harold R. Webb, Mrs. Carl B. Wetherell, Miss Helen E. Williams and Mrs. John Wilson.

New England Police Stories

“MOONLIGHT MURDER”

As Told by Ace Crime Reporters

Masked Gunman Slays Providence Girl Wounds Her Fiance

This is the 45th in a series of true detective stories from New England police annals being presented daily by the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Fred Perkins, one of the ace reporters for the American and Sunday Advertiser, relates this gripping story of “Moonlight Murder.”

Other stories in the series will be written by reporters whose by-lines are equally familiar throughout New England.

By FRED PERKINS

All the world loves a lover?

Police will tell you different‘

They'll tell you that young folks in love, yes, even old folks in love, are a favorite prey of thieves, robbers, chisellers, blackmailers—and murderers.!

"P[illegible]ing-party" killings, for one reason or another, are among the commonest of all types of homicides.

Very often, too, they're the hardest to solve. That's because so many possible motives enter into them.

Jealousy! Revenge! [illegible] Even morbid [illegible]

All these have brought death sudden and [illegible] to [illegible] and men and women [illegible] the very moment when life seemed a[illegible] rosiest.

The ancients used to [illegible] that when mortals are too happy, the gods become envious.

So, maybe, young B[illegible] Degnan and his sweetheart, pretty Rose [illegible] ought to have had a premonition of disaster as they sat together in [illegible] parked a[illegible] watching the moon [illegible] Providence river, on the night of S[illegible] 2[illegible]

Love in Bloom

They were planning to be married. And within the week Miss McKenna was to be maid of honor at the wedding of a [illegible] sister. Love was [illegible] of Rose and [illegible], both, that evening.

Just because the stars were so bright, just because the late summer air was soft and [illegible], just because the kisses they exchanged were so sweet [illegible] promise, the man and girl [illegible] have been appre[illegible] that they weren't, of course.

Nor were they [illegible] embarrassed when [illegible] approached them [illegible] off an East Providence [illegible] at a spot [illegible] view of the river.

If the sweethearts thought at all about the approaching stranger, they must have imagined he was some other [illegible] probably to borrow a match or ask what time it was.

They were startled [illegible] when the man [illegible]

"Why aren't your lights on?" he demanded.

Then before Degnan [illegible]

"Throw up your mitts!"

He lifted his right hand.

It held a gun, the [illegible] of which glinted [illegible] the moonlight.

At the first [illegible] concerning his extinguished auto lights, young [illegible] Degnan had reached toward the dash switch to snap them on.

Apparently the gunman saw this movement [illegible] Crash! Crash! Crash! Crash! Four times he fired.

How closely spaced the shots were, neither Degnan nor Rose McKenna could [illegible]

For one of the [illegible] had ripped through Degnan's extended hand and had [illegible] his chest, lodging near the heart.

And another of the [illegible] killed Miss McKenna.

Gunman Flees

The gunman had run away. Degnan observed dully. He himself was weakening fast. Pain was tearing at his lungs with every sobbing breath he took.

Against his shoulder, Rose, the girl he loved, was huddled [illegible]

Degnan's only thought, at the [illegible] was to get his wounded [illegible] to a doctor as quickly as [illegible]

[illegible] shouted at a passing auto-[illegible]

[illegible] driver and passengers seemed [illegible] seemed to be staring [illegible], but they didn't stop.

[illegible] and agonizingly, Degnan managed to start his engine and back his car to the highway. He headed for a section of East Providence where he remembered having seen a physician's name plate on a house.

Alone, he might not have made it. But he was overtaken by the [illegible] who had passed him who had observed something wrong and who had finally turned back after picking up [illegible] at a nearby [illegible]

One of the men from the rescue car took the wheel [illegible] now almost [illegible]

Wounded [illegible] office of Dr. George F. A[illegible]

He pronounced Miss McKenna dead!

Degnan according to the doctor had 'a chance, that was all! He was rushed to a hospital's emergency operating room.

Before unconsciousness overcame him Degnan had told a semi-delirious and incoherent story of the shooting.

Having had in his mind no doubt, a dim notion of shielding Miss McKenna's name from any breath of scandal he had not admitted that their car was parked [illegible] time of the crime.

He had been driving slowly, he [illegible] another car had [illegible] A man had [illegible] had ordered [illegible] then had commenced [illegible]

Police knew almost at once, that [illegible] the truth.

Scattered glass from the bullet-[illegible] windows of Degnan's car was [illegible] about the actual [illegible] of the shooting.

[illegible] of course, was well off the [illegible]

[illegible] on the ground, were [illegible] of the exploded cartridges [illegible] murder gun.

[illegible] the very nature [illegible] have suspects.

[illegible] "[illegible]" was he? [illegible] was trying to [illegible] quarrel preceded [illegible]

[illegible] a murder and attempt [illegible]

[illegible] asked themselves [illegible]

Distance Varies

[illegible] of Degnan and Miss McKenna were of the highest [illegible] were of good families [illegible] were well known [illegible] had any [illegible] ed of [illegible] at [illegible] the moonlight [illegible] river.

The [illegible] to [illegible] certain [illegible] had been a [illegible] automatic pistol [illegible] of weapon used [illegible] in [illegible]

[illegible] be found anywhere [illegible] of the spot [illegible]

[illegible] establishing that the bullet which struck Degnan had been fired from a distance of at least [illegible] feet.

On the other hand it was [illegible] estimated that the murder [illegible] when Miss McKenna was [illegible] had been held only about [illegible] six feet from her body.

Here was something to consider.

Apparently the killer, after wounding Degnan, had advanced a step or two then fired the shot which penetrated Miss McKenna's heart.

Real Clue

Who then [illegible]?

[illegible] a jealous suitor sought re[illegible]

Was there someone who resented [illegible] plans of Degnan and Miss McKenna so bitterly as to be willing to commit murder to prevent their realization?

Investigation answered these questions too in the negative.

First real clue to the possible identity of the murderer was obtained when there was found, in some shrubbery near the scene of the shooting a khaki handkerchief spotted [illegible] with strings dangling from its corners.

The strings, apparently, had been passed around the slayer's head [illegible] the handkerchief [illegible] his face.

Also found in the same shrubbery was a [illegible] watch cap.

These discoveries began to give a nautical atmosphere to the murder, an atmosphere which might be tied up, hypothetically, with Degnan's business employment, which was as a ships' chandler's [illegible]

His work took him constantly to the waterfront, where he met incoming vessels and learned what they needed in equipment and stores.

New theory of investigators on what they had learned thus far was that "river pirates" had attempted to put Degnan out of the way because of his known honesty [illegible] interference with [illegible] traffic in stolen ship [illegible]

Degnan, himself near death in a Providence hospital, couldn't be interviewed or questioned.

But reports were not lacking to the effect that he had frustrated more than one attempted water front [illegible]

[illegible] news, pers[illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] were picked up on [illegible] charge [illegible]

[illegible] outrage.

Degnan and Miss McKenna hadn't been the only couple to take advantage of the September 2nd [illegible]

Seated [illegible] a bench [illegible] had [illegible] a man and a woman.

Describe Him

They had heard gunfire and, a [illegible] later they had seen [illegible]

[illegible] were [illegible]

[illegible] of [illegible] light.

He [illegible] Leroy Roderick [illegible] letter carrier. He had been [illegible] with friends, who [illegible] Great Barrington parkway where the shooting had [illegible]

Awoke[illegible] reports he had stuck his head out of a window. He, too, had seen a man running. He too was able to describe [illegible]

[illegible] were straightway mustered to check the movements of every person who [illegible]

Get Confession

Little by little, the field of investigation narrowed.

Of assistance to officers were the handkerchief mask and the navy watch cap.

They had learned that the handkerchief itself was of an unusual type, a type manufactured for the American Red Cross which had [illegible] handkerchiefs [illegible] and [illegible] the World War.

[illegible] army or navy [illegible]

[illegible] watch cap [illegible] a sea-[illegible] connection.

With this much to go on investigators began to make real progress at last.

On September 9, one week after the killing, the alleged murderer was under arrest and police announced themselves to have a [illegible] fession.

In [illegible] at East [illegible] was [illegible] Adams, veteran of [illegible] United States navy [illegible] weather and [illegible] Providence [illegible]

Young Adams [illegible] said he had [illegible] was one of amazing [illegible] of his guilt [illegible]

Fingers Mask

Remaining a mystery [illegible] motive for the deed.

Police [illegible] robbery [illegible] explanation was lame.

Adams knew neither of his victims.

He had made no effort to take money from them, nor had he [illegible]

Best guess of the press [illegible] was that the [illegible] he was [illegible] had a detective [illegible] and found a thrill in spying [illegible] men and girls [illegible]

In seeming accordance with this theory was Adams' [illegible] According to the police [illegible] said in part:

"I left the house about 7 o'clock that night (September 2) and I met a fellow named Elmer ——.

"We walked along together talking. I remember we [illegible] about buying an automobile. We went along the parkway to a point where we were opposite Burgess avenue.

"At about 8 o'clock I left Elmer and I continued along the boulevard to Pawtucket avenue, later climbing down to the railroad tracks and circling Green's pond."

Presses Trigger

At this stage of [illegible] Adams, according to police [illegible] up the handkerchief [illegible] fingered it. He alleged [illegible]

"When I got back to the boulevard, I put on this headgear. It is a home-made affair. The handkerchief was issued to me when I left the naval training station at Newport. It was a part of a Red Cross kit.

"The string attached to the handkerchief I took from a suit box which was sent me by parcel post from a Providence store.

"After putting on the mask, I mussed up my hair and I hid my hat beside the highway near the Metacomet Golf Club.

"Walking further along the boulevard, I saw a car parked without lights about 50 feet off the road.

"When I had approached to within 10 or 15 feet of the machine, I asked the man where his lights were. Then I told him to put his mitts up.

"I saw the man reach for something, and I imagined it was a revolver.

"I had my hand at my thigh, but now I lifted it, so as to show that I had a gun.

"I suppose I must have pressed the trigger. And that's all there is to it.

Doesn't Know

Of course, I didn't mean to kill anybody. That wasn't in my head at all. I don't know how it happened. That's what I'd like to understand, myself.

"I don't know how many shots were fired. I imagine there were three or four. They were quick, like that—bang, bang, bang, bang!

"When I fired, I ran. I couldn't see where I was going, so I pulled off the mask and lost it. Then I got through a fence at the Metacomet Golf Club. I took the gun by the muzzle and threw it into the water.

"Crossing the golf links, I saw a man and a woman sitting on a bench. After disposing of the gun in the river, I went back to the boulevard, found my hat, and walked home. I think I got home about 11 o'clock."

Adams said he had bought the revolver July 2 [illegible] at an army and navy goods store in Providence. It was a 45 caliber automatic pistol. He had paid $[illegible] for the weapon, he said [illegible] purchased it [illegible] acting to act as a night watchman [illegible]

Regains Poise

[illegible] was Adams' [illegible] story. After [illegible] the young [illegible]

When it was [illegible] he repudiated [illegible]

He had made a [illegible] he said [illegible] seemed [illegible] a promise [illegible]

[illegible] the witness stand [illegible] a story which [illegible] the [illegible] which pinned the [illegible] or his own [illegible] Elmer [illegible], with whom he had [illegible] night of the [illegible]

To Elmer, Adams testified, he had lent [illegible] The [illegible] before [illegible] of the shooting.

Gun Hidden

[illegible] of September 2 at [illegible] he had [illegible] Elmer if he would [illegible] with the gun and Elmer had said yes, he'd [illegible] it next day.

But next day, instead of returning the weapon, said Adams, Elmer had [illegible] but the gun was hidden "under a rock by the river near Watchemoket Cove."

Ex-Sailor Sentenced To Life

This testimony seemed intended to offset police evidence already given to the effect that, when official search for the murder weapon had been unavailing, Adams, in his jail cell, had drawn a map of the Watchemoket Cove ne[illegible] with a diagram showing the rock [illegible] when the gun was [illegible]

[illegible] said Adams [illegible] where it was found.

[illegible] he had drawn the map from [illegible] description of the place.

[illegible] with the [illegible] was the presence in [illegible] of Elmer [illegible]

[illegible] as he was, Adams [illegible] himself to look Elmer in the eye and say:

"You had the gun. You must have done it!"

Full Advantage

The prosecutor, Assistant Attorney General A. A. Capotosto took full advantage of the situation.

"Stand up, Elmer," he said.

"Is this the Elmer —— to whom you say you loaned your gun?" he thundered at Adams.

"It—er—looks like him," mumbled the defendant.

"Looks like him! Do you mean to say you don't know your own friend?"

Adams averted his eyes.

"He resembles Elmer ——" was the best he would say.

"So you don't remember Elmer ——?" the prosecutor continued, with biting irony. "You don't remember your life-long friend? You don't remember Elmer ——, who used to go to school with you? You don't remember Elmer ——, who was your playfellow? You don't remember Elmer ——, who, after a boyish quarrel with you, came over to your house one day and blacked both your eyes?"

Adams shook his head.

"Answer yes or no!"

"No!" said Adams.

[illegible] then and there he lost his [illegible] chance, if he had ever had one, of acquittal.

Refuse Alibi

It was of no use for his mother, [illegible] to testify that she had always taken care of the [illegible] and that she had [illegible] his possession.

[illegible] had Adams [illegible] that he [illegible] was outside [illegible]

Neither of Adams' parents could [illegible] admit he was [illegible] at home at [illegible] of the murder.

[illegible] witnesses were the [illegible] Adams the gun [illegible] who had [illegible] box wrapped with [illegible] to the handkerchief [illegible] former [illegible] testified that [illegible] one occasion [illegible] company's [illegible] Fourth of [illegible]

Figure Similar

Degnan, dangerously wounded in [illegible] had now recovered [illegible] to appear at the trial [illegible] that on account of the [illegible] he had been able to [illegible] figure clearly [illegible] was a figure identically like that of Adams.

[illegible] face had been [illegible] when Degnan saw him [illegible] when [illegible] was seen running away.

And there were three witnesses [illegible] Leroy Roderick and the golf [illegible] bench man and woman to [illegible] the fugitive was Adams or his double!

Mistaken?

They couldn't be, they said.

On the fleeing youth's face, like an accusing finger, had been the moonlight!

That moonlight!

It had made the murder possible and it had brought [illegible]

[illegible] persuaded young [illegible] Rose McKenna [illegible] the car by the [illegible]

[illegible] moonlight [illegible]

And [illegible] exposed the slayer [illegible] as he fled.

[illegible] moon has kept many a [illegible] down through the ages [illegible] keep!

[illegible] the jury found ex-sailor Adams guilty. He's serving a life sentence in Rhode Island state prison [illegible] the police [illegible], not a [illegible] world [illegible]

[illegible] how-[illegible] sweethearts can [illegible]

[illegible] some [illegible]

Paul Lukas' Kiss Bars Gloved Girl

Great Guy With Men

"Smacko" Is a Venerable Custom
PAUL LUKAS

By GEORGE HOLLAND

The gay and gallant Paul Lukas, who is in town today for a week of personal appearances at the Metropolitan, will kiss your hand, madame, if you don't wear gloves.

These blinking eyes watched him in action offstage last evening. He brings his heels sharply together, he bows stiffly from the waist, he draws the lady's hand to his lips and smacks.

If the gal has [illegible] she wishes [illegible]. The [illegible] at the Ritz [illegible] and two [illegible] members of the [illegible] wearing [illegible] disappointment.

For the Lukas [illegible] not touch suede and cotton [illegible] that is part of the hand [illegible] for there is a code about this venerable custom.

Another Matter

Now perhaps [illegible] wondering how Mr. Lukas [illegible] with the [illegible] of the press who have been known to [illegible] the hand [illegible].

He [illegible] or two with Mr. Lukas and [illegible] that the hand-kissing [illegible] is not a [illegible] has been [illegible] Hungarian [illegible] and although Mr. Lukas [illegible] an American citizen [illegible] months [illegible].

He [illegible] for Hungary [illegible] service [illegible] fighting with a variety of [illegible] through his first day in town in an effort to find a Hungarian restaurant in Boston. If there are any, please write.

This gentleman from the far western reaches of America proved himself as friendly as a pup and as simple a soul as possible. One of the [illegible] Hollywood Paul Lukas became [illegible] delightful [illegible] of the camera [illegible].

I met him [illegible] at the Paramount studios soon after the coming of the talking pictures. Bartlett Cormack, a playwright and scenario-writer, was trying to cheer him. Mr. Lukas was disconsolate about his accent. He did not believe that he could grapple with the English tongue with enough success to make him easily [illegible].

Mr. Cormack [illegible] pooh-poohing [illegible] on the old argument that a [illegible] actor can always get [illegible]. Paul Lukas works when ever he wishes. He [illegible] Palm Springs and [illegible] week-ends from his apartment in Hollywood when he is engaged in making a picture.

He has his own [illegible] and has flown 500 hours [illegible]. He is married to a [illegible] who was not an actress. When he gets his citizenship papers, they are going to adopt a baby. He [illegible] on a [illegible] hobby with evident pleasure and manages to keep up his [illegible] with the more practiced of his [illegible] companions.

The women, even those who wear gloves, find him charming [illegible]. For the men the guy has a great sense of humor and a beaming friendliness that you can't escape.

LANDON GAINS SEEN BY BUDD

Los Angeles, March 20—Sentiment in favor of Governor Alf Landon of Kansas as the Republican nominee for President is increasing in all parts of the country, Ralph Budd, president of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, and the Colorado and Southern Lines, stated here today.

He said:

"As I traveled about the country I found popular sentiment increasing in favor of the Kansas governor."

An increasingly optimistic picture confronts the railroads of the Middle West, Budd said. His own road has found for the first three months this year an average increase of 15 per cent in hauling virtually all commodities.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION

TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS —TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS!

Hundreds of extra votes in the 1936 Popular Pilot Poll being conducted by Junior Birdmen during March will be recorded over the week-end when special movie shows, stunts and talks will be given at theaters whose managers are co-operating in the nation-wide election to determine Young America's favorite airman.

All boys and girls 10 to 21 are eligible to cast one vote each. Ballots will be found in the theaters named in this column. Look for the big sign reading "Vote Here and Read Results in the Boston Evening American."

At the Central Square, Cambridge, and the Egyptian, Brighton, "Bob" Mills, master of ceremonies, will explain the poll to the "Kiddies Clubs" tomorrow afternoon and urge all members to vote.

Manager Maurice Corkery, a YD veteran who saw Lufberry and other famous pilots on the western front, reports Lindbergh is leading in the votes of Central Square patrons.

Admiral Byrd is ahead at the Capitol Theater, Allston, where John B. Carroll is manager. A large vote over the week-end is expected here and at the Allston Theater, 128 Brighton avenue, managed by Edward Welsh.

A treat is in store for children who attend the Colonial Theater, Natick, tomorrow afternoon. Mrs. Nancy G. Harris, manager, has invited Captain F. Fletcher Ingalls, Natick-Wellesley airport chief, to talk.

Manager George Heeley, Jr., of the Dudley, Roxbury, will make a similar announcement tomorrow to members of the popular Dudley Junior Club.

Lindbergh is also the favorite of children attending the Rivoli Theater, Roxbury, according to Lewis Newman, another air-minded manager.

Other theaters where votes may be cast are Capitol, Everett; Central Square, Waltham; Criterion, Roxbury; Harvard, Cambridge; Marlborough, Marlborough; Paramount, Needham; Park and Rialto, Everett, and Strand, Somerville.

TRUCKS BRING BOSTON MILK

From flooded sections of New England, where approach by train is impossible, Boston's largest milk distributors announced today that trucks have succeeded in bringing through milk.

G. H. Hood, Jr., supervisor of the country operations of H. P. Hood & Sons, declared that he dispatched trucks into the dairy regions before the flood had reached its highest peak.

He said:

"Our country transportation departments are on 24-hour service and in constant communication with country receiving stations. We are working closely with rail officials and highway departments."

Trucks and tank cars have been placed at strategic points. In this way supplies of today's fresh milk will be on the way to Boston long before train service is resumed.

OATH BACKERS TO GET INNING

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

Today is the anniversary of the birth of Charles William Eliot, late president of Harvard University, who was born in 1834 and died in 1926.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

Harvard is celebrating it, as usual, this time with what may prove to be a significant address by President Conant.

All events in this tercentenary of Harvard's founding can be made significant, but few offer the opportunity of analyzing and summing certain aspects of Harvard's past as well as Eliot's birthday.

It will be interesting to see how Conant handles it.

For instance, the matter of money. Eliot was the son of a rich man, mayor of Boston, reputed a millionaire. But while he was still a young instructor his father became bankrupt and on the young teacher fell the burden of his parents as well as his own family.

A sober frugality, whether inherent or impressed on him by circumstances, became one of his characteristics as president. He assumed that the young gentlemen of Harvard should be plain in their manners and customs of living. Tuition was low even up to 25 years ago. Scholarships were kept at a modest level. Living conditions in the old buildings were of quite emphatic plainness, even bareness.

Eliot Liked to Tell of Before Plumbing Days

Mr. Eliot liked to tell of the days when the university privy was in the bushes at the back of University Hall, when he, as a freshman, had the first carpet laid down in a Yard dormitory, when the Yard pump was a necessity and not a picturesque bit of antiquity.

Throughout his administration he bothered very little about renovating the democratic dormitories in the yard. He didn't approve particularly of the new, private Gold Coast dormitories on Mount Auburn street. He liked the old ways.

Even in my day, the year when he resigned, we warmed ourselves in Thayer 49 with exiguous fires of coal or coke, showered ourselves in dark and damp basements—the students called them and the correlative plumbing "mines"—and not, I believe, until Lowell became president did hot water and modern plumbing become a matter of course in the Yard dorms.

Lowell, of course, was a wealthy man. He believed that the undergraduates should live like gentlemen, and so rich was the flood of million dollar bequests during his presidency that the Freshman Dormitories and the House Plan which he set up through Harkness generosity made the old Gold Coast private dormitories look shabby and outmoded.

Such luxury was a new idea at Harvard, together with a kind of luxurious social freedom hitherto always soberly repressed. I should give something to know how Dr. Conant regards the present set up of the Houses.

"Better Minds" Appeal to Conant

Conant was a local boy of modest means and it is significant that his chief interest seems to lie in making the way as easy as possible for the better minds among scholarship boys.

To him the old scholarships of $150 or $200 are only tantalizing. He seems comparatively little interested in the democratic mass of the Yankee middle class, who were to Eliot the very salt of the earth.

He turns his attention chiefly to the intellectual aristocrats whom he envisages apparently as being produced by synthetic means, chiefly large scholarships and fellowship stipends.

I suspect that Eliot would have been dubious about both the luxury of the House Plan and the lavishness of Conant's scholarship philosophy, particularly his emphasis on the intellectual aristocracy.

To Eliot Harvard was a collection of the more promising boys from the better Yankee families, destined to trade and commerce and the professions, rather than to research and specialization in the arts and sciences of pure knowledge.

They were characterized by what a Harvard commentator once called "undifferentiated efficiency," members of a superior and useful social group but emphatically not a mandarin caste.

This year, particularly, it is well to remember the traditions of the old Harvard and the man who for so many years molded that Harvard in the light of his own character and convictions.

Conant Air Talk Opens Jubilee

HARVARD 300TH YEAR MARKED

President James B. Conant of Harvard steps before the microphone tonight to speak to the nation on "Harvard, Present and Future," and the official curtain of Harvard's 300th anniversary jubilee goes up.

Beginning today, the most elaborate academic celebration in American history is to continue for the next six months, marking the growth and progress of Harvard during three centuries of new world history.

"We hope that the occasion may have deep significance for the whole country," President Conant said today.

"The founding of Harvard, after all, merely marks the first step in a long chain of events which led to the establishment of colleges and universities throughout the country.

"Thus, it is the beginning of higher education in the United States rather than the founding of a particular college that we hope to celebrate."

Citizens Aiding

He added:

"From the point of view of Greater Boston, this celebration of ours must have a peculiar significance, for we are celebrating the founding of Harvard by the General Court of Massachusetts.

"To co-operate with us in this whole affair, the mayors of Boston and Cambridge have named a committee of citizens who have already begun active work in co-operation with the director of the tercentenary."

Tonight's speech by President Conant in commemoration of the birthday of the late President Charles W. Eliot of Harvard introduced a series of tercentenary events to conclude with an international gathering of scholars and alumni in Cambridge on September 16 to 18.

'Mardi Gras' Air

Guests from more than 700 universities, colleges and learned societies throughout the world have been invited. Alumni reunions, processions, concerts, gala festivals, undergraduate functions and a host of receptions will lend Cambridge an air of Mardi Gras during the early fall.

One of the most curious ceremonies of the tercentenary will be President Conant's opening of a package of unknown contents sealed by President Quincy of Harvard in 1836, for inspection a hundred years later.

Jealousy Cure Due Hollywood Trial

Paris, March [illegible] (US)—Dr. R. R. Greenschpoon of Los Angeles has sailed blithely for the United States, stating he is bearing a great gift to Hollywood—an almost sure cure for jealousy.

He sailed on the Aquitania with his wife, who he said will devote herself to the problem child of movie stars.

Dr. Greenschpoon wants to open a "jealousy clinic" in the American movie capital. He said he has been conducting a Vienna clinic where 90 per cent of the "jealousy patients" were women, nearly all of whom were successfully treated. Said the doctor:

"It is a cure for neurotics with jealousy as the foundation [illegible] their abnormal actions."

Italian Line Adds Freight Service

A new increased freight service between Mediterranean ports and Boston by Italian Line freighters will become effective on March 22, it was announced today by Patterson Wylde & Company, freight agents.

Five freighters are scheduled to sail next month, with the freighter Lucia C sailing on March 22 followed two days later by the motor ship Giulia.

Persons 70 Free From Poll Tax

On a standing vote the State Senate passed to be engrossed a bill to exempt persons of 70 years or more from payment of a poll tax. The bill passed in the House previously.

Wife Won't Return, Man Shoots Self

Fall River, March 20—Under treatment at Truesdale Hospital for a bullet wound in the shoulder, self-inflicted, police said, because his wife would not return to him, Everett Maning, 22, of Bay street was expected to recover today.

ROOSEVELT TO CRUISE

N. E. Coast Believed Due for Visit

Indication that President Roosevelt plans another summer vacation cruise in New England waters was seen today in reports he had chartered for the season the schooner Sewanna, owned by Harrison Tweed of New York.

The Sewanna is now being fitted at the Casey boatyard, Fairhaven, with George Brodeur in charge. Brodeur is understood to have received orders to have the schooner ready for launching before June 1.

CRUISED N. E. COAST

Three years ago the President cruised up the Atlantic coast to Maine in the Amberjack, and it is believed charter of the Sewanna means another coastwise trip for the President and his sons.

James, Franklin, Jr., and John Roosevelt visited the Casey boatyard on Washington's Birthday and inspected the Sewanna, a 60-foot schooner yacht built in Maine five years ago.

ENGINE FOR REPAIRS

Auxiliary power is supplied by a Diesel engine which has been returned to the factory for complete overhauling.

The Sewanna has a large double stateroom off the main cabin, with galley amidships and crew's quarters forward. The craft is deemed an able cruising yacht with ample deck and cockpit room.

Safety Code in Homes Urged to Save Lives

Miss Katharine Fisher, director of Good Housekeeping Institute, in an address at the Hotel Statler today, told members of the American Home and Youth Conference at their eighth annual convention of the need of a safety code in the home.

The conference is sponsored by the Massachusetts Federation of Women's Clubs.

"Last year there were 31,300 persons killed in home accidents, while millions were injured more or less seriously," said Miss Fisher.

"Nearly all home accidents can be prevented by a little more care, knowledge of unsafe conditions and checking up on conditions around the home. We should be aware of the causes and apply the remedies, usually simple.

"Man's home is his castle. We cannot invade it with regulations. We can, however, volunteer to make periodic inspections of conditions in our own home and encourage others to do the same.

"I should like to see our houses more suitably arranged for children. In every home where there are young toddlers, there should be a gate at the head of every flight of stairs.

"Hooks for children's clothing should be hung low, to remove the temptation to stand on a chair. The switch for turning on the bathroom light should be within their reach. A night light, suitably placed, will prevent many a fall in the dark.

"And speaking of lights, more consideration should be given to good home lighting, not only for lighting dark corners but for study and other close work.

"We have outlined a safety code at Good Housekeeping Institute and we urge parents to use it for a periodic checkup about the house. A copy is sent free. Homes that have an ade-washing machine, carries a message of safety as well as of efficiency."

quate safety code in daily action are safer places for children.

"A few hazards are responsible for many tragic accidents. One is the use of gasoline for cleaning. Use only a non-inflammable solvent in a very well ventilated room. Another very serious hazard is the use of kerosene for kindling a fire.

"Falls lead as the cause of home accidents. If there are holders under the rugs, these will not slip. Modern equipment for housework has introduced some possibilities for new hazards, but good equipment, if properly used, should make homes safer. In testing equipment at Good Housekeeping Institute, we give close attention to its safety aspects. Our seal of approval on any device, from a can-opener to a

Hearing to Resume on Tuesday

FOES APPEAL FOR MORE TIME

Opponents of repeal of the teachers' oath law are expected to have their opportunity to make known their stand next Tuesday when the legislative committee on education resumes its hearing.

Possibility that others favoring repeal may be given an opportunity to speak was also seen in the appeal of James H. Sheldon of Boston University against the decision of Senator Charles G. Miles to conclude discussion by proponents of repeal with yesterday's session.

Senator Miles took the appeal under consideration and said the whole committee would vote on the question before the hearing is resumed Tuesday.

Sheldon pointed out that educators from various sections of the state were unable, through flood or other reasons, to reach Boston for yesterday's session and deserved the opportunity to be heard.

[illegible] yesterday's session [illegible] representatives of teaching and labor groups characterized the law as "Fascist, un-American and a sop to Communistic beliefs."

Mather Heard

Speeches and resolutions heard by the committee called the law an "insult" to the teaching profession and the "beginnings of a wedge" to bring the state's educational system under "fear and repression."

Professor Kirtley Mather of Harvard, who first refused to sign the oath and finally surrendered to [illegible] to his university, gave a lengthy talk on his [illegible].

He said the law was a [illegible] of the oath of office. Teachers from other parts of the country resent the law, he declared.

Professor Samuel Eliot Morison of Harvard declared such oaths were outmoded and similar to Puritan "blue laws."

Doug and Bride To Visit Hollywood

London, March 20 (US)—Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., informed the London Daily Mail that he and his bride, the former Lady Sylvia Ashley, will leave England shortly for California to spend a few months before going to China. Fairbanks stated:

"We had a whirlwind air honeymoon tour of Spain. We hardly stayed in the same place two nights in succession."

TRIBUTE ON ARMY DAY

N. Y. to Honor Unknown Soldier

New York, March 20 (US)—Tribute to the unknown soldier will be paid by participants and spectators in the Army Day parade April 4.

With a Gold Star mother in charge and a guard of honor from the Unknown Soldier Post of the American Legion, a large floral wreath will be borne in the parade, later to be sent by airplane to the Unknown Soldier's [illegible] at Arlington National Cemetery.

When the [illegible] wreath passes the reviewing stand at [illegible] street, all bands and other musical organizations in the parade will cease playing for a period of [illegible] seconds. Taps will be sounded.

Originated by Unknown Soldier Post, the idea has the support of the entire Legion membership of New York City. Final plans will be made tomorrow for the Legion's part of the program, which will carry on through Sunday with ceremonies on the Plaza, in front of the Bronx county building. The Veterans of Foreign Wars, with U. S. S. Akron Post in charge, will begin Army Day ceremonies at 12:15 a. m. with a radio broadcast over an inter-city network of 39 stations extending from Washington to Boston. The ceremonies will be a tribute to members of the crew lost on the U. S. S. Akron which fell into the Atlantic at 12:33 a. m. on April 4th, 193[illegible].

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Marjorie McBride

A wholesome movie or an exciting book can reform a wayward girl, or detour a bad boy headed straight for the penitentiary. Judges Emma Fall Schofield and Sadie Lipner Shulman agree on that. Both handle plenty of juvenile delinquents.

MARJORIE McBRIDE

In their time both have "sentenced" children on probation to read a certain novel or see a certain film. Whisper it softly, but both have seen to it that the necessary money was available. Silly movies and trashy stories exercise a sinister influence on the unformed mind, as well they know. But . . . they say . . . you can't people a child's world exclusively with don'ts.

When you take something away, you must substitute something better. Judges Shulman and Schofield think pictures such as "David Copperfield" and "Little Lord Fauntleroy" are excellent medicine for boys and girls inclined to go astray. Both are crammed with pathos, but a child's normal instinct takes it and asks for more.

In assigning boys and girls to read certain books, each of the women judges takes into account the individuality of the youthful delinquent. Certain books, however, are universally regarded as character builders and often prescribed. Such as "Ivanhoe," the "Swiss Family Robinson," "The Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin" and a biography of Mark Twain, suitable to adolescents.

Neither Judge Shulman nor Judge Schofield has gone so far as to make up an authors' list for the wayward.

But they concur in the view that writers who have an excellent influence on headstrong children include J. Fenimore Cooper, Booth Tarkington, Dickens, Kipling, Jack London and Lewis Carroll.

Fraulein Ina Gotthelf of Berlin, a student at Tufts's Fletcher School of Diplomacy, thinks the present row in Europe is a tempest in a teapot. Nothing ominous will come of it. Probably few of the kids who slid down the mound southeast of bandstand in the Common this winter realize the little hill used to be known as the Smokers' Circle. Probably most of them wouldn't care.

Until 1851, according to historians, smoking in the public street was a misdemeanor. Smokers who were caught were fined. Even on the Common, it was forbidden. By some sort of gentleman's agreement, the little mound was made a sanctuary for the rascals who loved the pipe or cigar. The mound was higher then.

AUSTEN LAKE

Profile of an Elder; Connie Mack Sits For His Portrait

CONNIE MACK WAS A SOLITARY, solemn figure when I saw him, spare and gaunt, on the steps of Bradenton's Manatee Hotel. His pale eyes were set a little deeper under the arches of his shaggy brows, and his voice, always low, was little more than a murmur.

AUSTEN LAKE

Not that, for all his 73 years, Connie was failing; merely that he felt his loneness this Spring, and, like a bewildered turtle, had shrunk into his shell.

There was, I felt, a sense of thwart about the old man, who looked through and past you as he talked. And he said, with a trace of irony, that he doubted if he was worthwhile copy for a newsman, "now," he added, with a slight twist at his mouth corners.

He lives, I learned from one of the three newsmen with the Athletics, in a kind of cloistered privacy between practice periods, puttering with his papers and brooding on his thoughts, which are mostly shadows drawn from the past.

And the writer said, "Hell, we started out to be sore at Connie, but we ended by being sorry."

That afternoon, against the Cardinals I watched Connie clad in an ulster though the weather was warm, fidgeting his score card and sometimes strumming his lower lip, absorbed by the play of kids a third his age.

There was much in his attitude that was like the graybeards of St. Petersburg, who sit under the waterfront banyans and dream over chessboards.

* * *

Could Have Sold Athletics Last Winter

"DON'T," THE PHILADELPHIA WRITER had cautioned, "make the mistake of asking Connie when he intends to retire." And he screwed down his eye with an ominous warning.

I knew what he meant. Years ago, seven at least, I had asked Connie that and drawn a flash of irritation that was more convincing for the sudden contrast with his calm.

But oddly, Connie volunteered the topic, later on the steps.

Was baseball still fun?

He said yes, stretching the word out (yeeessa), and then, bending the deep clefts in his cheeks, "Some people think I've had my turn and ought to give a younger man a chance."

He said this with the rising inflection of a question, insinuating a challenge, and casting a bleak hen's eye sidewise.

"Well . . ." I said, at a loss.

"Well," he picked up my word with mild defiance, "I've had several offers to sell this winter."

He wouldn't sell because, with all its headaches, he liked the game. And he wouldn't quit until his knees creaked and Pullman porters had to load him on between sleeper jumps.

We sat down on the red wicker rockers. Connie still holding a sheaf of unmailed letters. Briefly he began to talk as though hungry for companionship, opening the floodgates of his mind and, in his whispering murmur, saying, of all the players he'd ever had, save only Eddie Collins, he missed Mickey Cochrane and Jimmy Foxx the most.

They were, he thought, his masterpieces, prizes in his life's collection, kids raised from the rough.

And he said, as a man grew older, he took less pride in championships than he did in moulding raw youth into finished stardom.

* * *

Connie's Kindergarten

HE WOULDN'T GET, I SUGGESTED, any comfort from buying his stars ready made, like Tom Yawkey, if he had the money?

He said frankly No, though he had once laid out nearly half a million for a lot of minor league talent, including Grove, Cochrane, Simmons, Bishop and others.

I gathered, like the Philly Nationals he would now raise young players for sale rather than pennants and that he would never try for another championship. And I recalled how, years ago, perhaps 1926, we had sat in the russet plush of the old Brunswick Hotel and he had said:

"If I can win another pennant, after that I won't care."

The players that he has now, nearly 50 of them and mostly smoothed-faced, cherub types, with here and there a grizzly like Rabbit Warstler and George Blaeholder. Charlie Berry remind one of the kindergarten troupes that Bob Quinn and Bill Carrigan used to lead into Bradenton in the old poorhouse days of the Red Sox.

There was the same puppy frisking, shirt tail pulling and giggle of girlish laughter on the curbstones where two overland buses waited for the last of the kids to come from the supper room.

"We'll whittle this crowd down by half," whispered Connie apologetically, like a gray schoolmaster on a museum tour with a batch of boarding pupils.

* * *

Yawkey's Angel Shape

THE ATHLETICS TODAY are physically where they were in 1916, when Connie auctioned off his pennant heroes and confidently, started to grow a new crop. That was 20 years ago, and Connie was a man of 53, frost just touching his dark hair.

For 10 years he combed the weeds and herded hundreds of adolescent school and farm boys through his mill. But, strangely, the Philadelphia people, who would not pay to watch his champions, came increasingly to see his peach-fuzz lads.

The foothills that are gentle slopes at 53 become impassable, rocky mountains 20 years later, and vaguely I mentioned courage.

"Courage," sniffed Connie, a humorous squint in his wrinkled eye, "we owed the banks money."

Pennants, he said, hold no sentimental value when creditors want to be paid. And he hoped when he owed the banks money again there would be more Foxxes, Cramers, Marcums and McNairs to sell, and more angel purchasers like Tom Yawkey to buy them.

Grove to Start Against Cardinals Tomorrow

Foxx Says He Never Saw Lefty in Such Great Trim Before

By Jimmy Foxx

Sarasota, Fla., March 20.—[illegible]

We may beat Lefty to it by gaining win No. 1 at the expense of the Brooklyn Dodgers today.

[illegible] even if we do. Ol' Mose will start for the first time on the morrow, and with a definite purpose in mind. He wants to get a line on those Cardinals hitters. He figures he might be firing them in the 1936 World Series.

"Lefty" is too ancient and canny a bird to open wide the throttle on his initial run. But I look for him to breeze enough fire balls by these Cards to make them think [illegible]

And watching him breeze that pill through there as only he can won't hurt our confidence a bit either.

As I've mentioned before, I never saw our southpaw with more stuff.

He was so fast last time he warmed up, that one of his pitches took the glove right off Skeets Dickey, and the catcher finally had to chase a [illegible] of the [illegible]

As brilliant as was Mose in his remarkable comeback last season, it's my guess the 1936 Grove will be a revelation to Boston fans.

Talking about [illegible] I rather expect our showing to date is a revelation which is [illegible] by our supporters up North.

Though we're living up to my boast by making an average of five runs per game, we're still victoryless after four starts.

Like every dark cloud this one hovering over us has its silver lining. In each of our defeats thus far we've had [illegible] until the last man is out. We couldn't have [illegible] more striking example of [illegible] of that than the game with the Athletics furnished.

We were leading when the A's went to bat in the ninth. Believing we had the verdict all sewed up, we relaxed a bit. Quicker than it takes to give the details, the Macks put over five runs and won out.

We consider our best pitching yet that received from the veteran [illegible] during the first three innings of the game.

[illegible] yielded only one hit [illegible]

[illegible] Jack Wilson, finishing up was fine from the sixth until an [illegible] in the ninth inning.

None of the A's pitchers—Smith, Veach and Trexler, was impressive. They wouldn't or couldn't give me a good ball to hit, walking me four times.

Alumnus Roger Cramer, however, fared well, getting two doubles and two singles. It was "Doc's" first display of his true hitting stride.

I don't know a thing about the Dodgers, our opponents today, except that Casey Stengel, their manager, is a great guy.

Furthermore, I'm too sore to make any inquiries about them. Trying to get colleague Cashman home in time to file a story, I was nabbed while doing a mere 70 and couldn't talk my way out of posting a $25 bond.

I intend to make some ball club pay for that indignity, and I hope it's the Dodgers.

Jimmy Foxx' next article will appear in the Boston Evening American tomorrow.

CRIMSON BOWS

New Haven, March 20 (I.N.S.)—Yale's virtually invincible swimming team defeated Harvard's mermen, 45 to 26, here.

It was the 151st consecutive dual meet triumph for the Elis since they were defeated by Navy in 1924.

Captain Norris Hoyt led Yale's victorious forces against the Crimson. Hoyt won the 220 and 440-yard freestyle races.

Charley Hutter starred for Harvard, finishing on top in the 50 and 100-yard freestyle events.

Hutter set a Yale pool record with his 100-yard victory, covering the century in 52.5, shading the former record of 52.6 set by Jack Macionis and Dave Livingston.

Graham Cummin, of Harvard, lowered another Yale record when he captured the 150-yard backstroke under Hoyt's old mark of 1:41.4.

10-ROUND GO BETWEEN O'BOYNE AND ENNIS SPICES GARDEN BILL

By Jack Conway

Ken Overlin will carry the Jack Dempsey colors when he clashes with Johnny Rossi in the feature ten-round bout of a Goodwin A. C. show at the Garden tonight.

Garden Card

TEN ROUNDS

Ken Overlin, New York, vs. Johnny Rossi, Worcester.

Jackie Ennis, Newark, vs. Irish Jimmy O'Boyne, Maine.

Honey Mellody, Charlestown, vs. Bobby Allen, Nova Scotia.

SIX ROUNDS

Dick Hogan, Charlestown, vs. Jimmy Astall, Boston.

FOUR ROUNDS

Dan Bonnin, Connecticut, vs. Steve Piasta, Worcester.

Pat O'Brien, Dorchester, vs. George McKinley, Revere.

Overlin is one of the better of the younger crop of middleweights. Dempsey recently agreed to guarantee Babe Risko $15,000 if he would risk placing his chin in the way of Overlin's punches.

Rossi, like Overlin, has been shooting for a title [illegible] with Risko. It is likely that Matchmaker Rip Valenti will try to sign the victor of tonight's go to meet the champion.

Dempsey has made it clear in a telegram received by this writer from New York that he never wanted to referee the bout between Overlin and Rossi. Dempsey wired as follows:

"I have a financial interest in Overlin and naturally would not agree to referee his bout with Rossi.

"I shall be prepared to referee either of the other ten-round bouts on tonight's card. You can make it as strong as you like that Overlin will chill Rossi."

Dempsey will map out the plan of battle for Overlin tonight. He has high hopes in the ability of this youngster to scale the fistic heights.

Rossi is a fast, clever boxer and a sharp puncher. He is an exceptionally good ring general and is of the opinion he will outpoint Overlin, and maybe stop him.

Dempsey will appear as a referee tonight. He will probably officiate in the Melody-Allen bout while Jack Sharkey will referee the O'Boyne-Ennis match.

One of the regular officials of the Massachusetts Boxing Commission will be in charge of the Rossi-Overlin go.

The ten-round bout between Irish Jimmy O'Boyne and Jackie Ennis of Newark should be jammed with thrills.

Ennis takes the place of Joe Ricciotti, who was injured training.

The other ten will find Bobby Allen, Nova Scotia welterweight, tossing leather at Honey Mellody of Charlestown. Allen has been active around the New England circuit and has scored some good wins.

CHARITY SKATING CARNIVAL OPENS AT ARENA

Evelyn Chandler, Maribel Vinson Display Skill

By Will Connell

Whirlwind action on a black and white ice stage comes to Boston tonight at the Arena with the opening performance of the Skating Club of Boston ice carnival for the benefit of the Convalescent Home of the Children's Hospital.

The opening tonight, another complete performance with full lighting effects tomorrow afternoon and the finale tomorrow night round out the affair.

The carnival, this year titled "Hollywood on Skates," is the most colorful sports event of the year. Champions give the solo numbers of each act with a large supporting cast of elaborately costumed skaters in each number.

Evelyn Chandler of Chicago, world's acrobatic skating champion, has the top billing as she makes her first appearance in Boston.

Douglas Duffy of New York, famed comedy skater, is another professional star added to the program today.

CHAMPIONS

Other headliners include Robin Lee of St. Paul, U. S. men's single champion; Maribel Vinson of New York and Boston, U. S. women's champion; Miss Vinson and George E. B. Hill, pair champions; Roger Turner of the Skating Club, many times U. S. champion; Mr. and Mrs. Willie Frick of Boston, great professional figure skaters.

Louise Reburn and Stewart Reburn, of the Canadian Olympic team; Guy Owen of Ottawa, the Ottawa Four, Polly Blodgett, Joan Tozzer, Bernard Fox, Suzanne Davis King, the latter ex-U. S. women's champion, and many others.

The Arena ice surface is a huge black and white star, spectacular setting for the fete.

"Hollywood on Skates" opens with a theater lobby scene with the corps of ushers under the direction of Guy Slade, Harvard band drillmaster.

The second act is a Silly Symphony by permission of Walt Disney, creator of the colored animated cartoons.

Fiesta, a Spanish scene starring Miss Chandler and Guy Owen; the Great Waltz with Mr. and Mrs. Frick headlined, the Russian pageant with half a dozen soloists, also are on the card.

Boxing Results

Miami, Fla.—Joe Knight, Cairo, Ga., down in last round, awarded decision over Dewey Kimrey, Charlotte, N. C. They are light heavyweights. Nick Camarata, 128, New Orleans, took one-sided bout from Billy Herman, 130, Worcester, eight rounds.

Salem—Willie Hagen, Haverhill, easily outpointed Joe La Miens, Montreal, six rounds.

Cramer His Bustin' Self

By Joe Cashman

Sarasota, Fla., March 19—There was one beaming smile overshadowing forty frowns as our Red Sox, after four defeats in as many Grapefruit League starts, prepared to tangle with Casey Stengel's Dodgers from Brooklyn here this afternoon.

It belonged, the [illegible] grin, to Roger "Doc" Cramer, acquired from the Athletics at great expense to patrol center field for our [illegible].

What was the reason?

The [illegible] a ball player is ever happy [illegible] base hits.

Roger contracted the malady while making his first start against his former Mackian mates, with whom he hit a cool .332 last season.

Until his visit to Fort Meyers he'd been in a slump that dated back to the day he reported for training.

But once back in the familiar surroundings of Fort Meyers, he quickly recovered his batting eye, rapping out two doubles and two singles. It certainly wasn't his fault that the Sox blew the decision, 9-8, when the A's put over five runs in the ninth.

There's little Roger can't do with the willow when he's hot. A left-handed swinger, he can knock down the barriers in right, center and left, drop drag-bunt base hits and produce fool proof sacrifices.

[illegible] American League [illegible]

[illegible] Red Sox [illegible] A's.

We wonder if he stopped, either, if the Croninmen won the ball game today.

Anyway, they'll be at full strength, outside of battery, for the first time.

Billy Werber will start at third, and "Heinie" Manush will open in left field. The outcome rests in the hands of Joe Cascarella and "Stew" Bowers.

Bees Grapefruit Kings

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 20.—[illegible]

[illegible] the American and National Leagues [illegible] as the [illegible]

[illegible] the Red Sox.

[illegible] through [illegible] expects to finish at the head of the second [illegible] seventh [illegible]

The [illegible] and the Red Sox are probably the most expensive clubs [illegible]

The Bees at the moment are a patchwork of two or three clubs plus a quantity of minor league [illegible] headed anywhere in particular.

[illegible] of the Grapefruit League [illegible] a different story.

The Red Sox haven't beaten anyone yet, and no one has been able to upset the Bees, who hold a decision over the world champion Tigers themselves, as well as over the Cincinnati Reds, who in turn walloped the Sox on two different occasions.

As for the [illegible] well the Bees [illegible] quarrel with the [illegible]

[illegible] the Tigers and [illegible] forward [illegible] American League [illegible] tomorrow, the New York Yankees, who for the past [illegible] years have been their [illegible] in the Sunshine [illegible]

And don't be surprised if they [illegible] the Yankees, as usual, are carrying a heavy [illegible] portside batters.

To counteract this, McKechnie intends to unfurl his own southpaw pitching staff of Sharkey, Eiland, Hobart Scott, Gerald Veach and Jim McCloskey.

Sullivan, Poulin Meet in Lynn Ring

Eddie Kid Sullivan of Walpole meets Gaby Poulin of Montreal in the eight-round feature bout at Quincy Arena tonight.

Sullivan is boxing better than ever, scoring five straight K. O.'s.

Poulin comes here with a record of 47 wins in 51 bouts in the Dominion. In his only start here he stopped Andy Chapdelaine in two heats.

The six-round semifinal brings together [illegible] of Walpole and Joe Gorman of South Boston.

Four-round bouts pair Tommy Broullard, Worcester, and [illegible] of Lowell, and Tony [illegible], Taunton; Pinky Foley, Worcester, and Paul Silva, Bridgewater; Jackie Daley, Quincy, and Ray Courtney, Brockton; Joe Little, Dorchester, and Eddie Dundee, Boston.

4 REASONS MEN SWITCH TO America's largest-selling cigar

1 PHILLIES is a mild cigar—yet has the full, rich flavor of Havana. You can't beat that combination for an enjoyable, satisfying smoke.

2 I'm what is called a "hard smoker." I can smoke up to 20 PHILLIES a day and never get that "I've-been-smoking-too-much" feeling. They don't bite my tongue.

3 *PHILLIES suits my taste better than any of the higher-priced cigars I've smoked. It has cut my cigar costs in half * * * My wife likes the aroma of PHILLIES.*

4 I like a cigar that burns slowly and evenly—that doesn't drop ashes—and has no bitter last half. PHILLIES is that kind of cigar.

PHILLIES has what men want for a truly enjoyable cigar. Mildness? Yes . . . but with that rich, smooth, satisfying flavor that comes from fine, mild Havana blended with choice Domestic.

These fine tobaccos in PHILLIES are Long-filler tobaccos—not short-fillers or scraps. That's the secret of its slow, even burning—its firm, clean ash—and the absence of loose ends coming out in your mouth.

Since its reduction in price from 10c to 5c, more men have switched to PHILLIES than to any other cigar offered for sale. It's America's largest-selling cigar—with the same shape—same size—same tobaccos that made it America's largest-selling 10c brand.

Millions of men—looking for greater pleasure from a cigar—have found it in PHILLIES . . . and for only 5c. Try it!

HIGHEST POINT WORTH GETTING ON

WILSON'S Choice in SEVENTH

BARON LYNN HAS APPEAL

By Dave Wilson

(Selections made for fast track)

BEST BET—HIGHEST POINT, SEVENTH RACE

Tropical Park, Fla., March 20—Highest Point is the "tops" over $1500 top and $1250 bottom platers opposing him in the one mile and a sixteenth of the seventh stanza here this afternoon.

FIRST RACE

Vanda Cerulea, Waterset, Queen Vic

VANDA CERULEA, third to High Torque and Dixie Princess, performed as if a trifle shy on racing condition. WATERSET'S last race was much too poor to be true. QUEEN VIC comes highly recommended by the clocking fraternity.

Dave Wilson

SECOND RACE

Hollyhock, Good Omen, Flavor

HOLLYHOCK, pitted a trifle too ambitiously in recent endeavors, needs only to put forth a best effort. GOOD OMEN, fast and faint-hearted, figures to hang on long enough to have the place from FLAVOR. The latter merits better than a fighting chance on best races.

THIRD RACE

Midnight Flyer, Toano, De Valera

MIDNIGHT FLYER, under a feather impost of 100 pounds, figures to lead this field from flag fall to wire. This sweet-running filly turned in a smashing second to Jack ripe only a few days back. TOANO figures close up on the strength of a recent second to Kawago. DE VALERA is heaps better than his last dull performance.

FOURTH RACE

Singer's Folly, Old Comrade, Cohambee

SINGER'S FOLLY, running like a "wild horse" in training, has only to run back to brilliant trials to graduate from the maiden ranks. The Whitneyite tapered off with an easy four panels in 0 48 3-5. OLD COMRADE, on recent form, is strictly the horse to fear. COHAMBEE, a slow beginner, figures to be along in time to share the minor award.

FIFTH RACE

Baron Lynn, Legion, Epitome

BARON LYNN awoke with a bang to drub Dark Friend and other capable platers in the mud only a few days back. The Collins colorbearer stands right out in the light of that performance. LEGION, on general form, figures to offer the contention. EPITOME has been training in private and may come up a "good thing."

SIXTH RACE

Crinoline, Brilliant Light, Pipes Pal

CRINOLINE displayed excellent form in showing to Swamp Angel and Air Force last trip. The Zakoor colorbearer descends the scale several notches in this affair. BRILLIANT LIGHT and PIPES PAL are the main dangers. They rate as named.

SEVENTH RACE

Highest Point, Tight Wad, Grandpa's Boy

HIGHEST POINT stands out as the most probable winner on the card. Recent good form says the Moor John colorbearer should never be headed in this affair. Contention, if any, will likely be furnished by TIGHT WAD. The latter ran a winning race after breaking slowly last time. GRANDPA'S BOY shapes up as the long shot possibility.

EIGHTH RACE

Far Cry, Jane D., Entree

Going out on the limb for FAR CRY in this affair. This plater will be coming up trained to the letter of perfection, while previous form says he is fully capable. He breezed eight panels in 1 43 2-5 in the mud for a final. JANE D is dropping down several notches. She looks all over the danger. ENTREE is a possibility on her last

Picard Ties 69 To Opening 67

Charleston, S. C., March 20 — Henry Picard of Hershey, Pa., added a 69 to his first round 67 to take a comfortable lead in the fourth annual $3000 Tournament of Gardens here.

Ky Laffoon, of Chicago, who was tied with Picard at the end of the first 18 holes, soared to a 76.

FROZEN FACTS

Paul Runge's Goal Eliminates Rangers | Bruins and Hawks Tied for Second

By BILL GRIMES

When blond Paul Runge, who has been kicking around the N. H. L. and Canam circuit for years, beat George Hainsworth for the goal which gave the Bruins a tie with the Leafs in Toronto, he not only eliminated the New York Rangers from the play-offs, but he was the means of the Bostonians moving right into second place of the American Division.

Bill Grimes

Bruins and Blackhawks are tied in points, but Frank Patrick's charges have one more victory to their credit than Chicago. In case these clubs both lose their final game of the regular season, the Bruins will be awarded second place.

Blackhawks will meet the Maroons tomorrow night in Montreal, and a defeat by the Windy City outfit, coupled with a Toronto victory over the Americans, would cost the Gorman group the Canadian Division title, for they have not won as many games as the Maple Leafs.

With the divisional title at stake, the Maroons will be out to do a job on the Hawks, and the chances are that the Bruins will take over undisputed possession of the running-up berth in their section by beating the Rangers.

In the event that Bruins and Maple Leafs finish second in their respective divisions, Boston and Toronto fans will be treated to another sensational two-out-of-three-game play-off series, which will start in the Queen City next Tuesday night.

* * *

Indians and Ramblers May Meet Here Tomorrow

Up in Toronto they'll try to tell you that the Bruins were covered with horse shoes when they got away with the tie game. They point to the Cooney Weiland tally, which they claim was scored while Red Horner was replacing a broken stick, and they say that Paul Runge was lucky enough to catch all of the Leafs down the ice when he broke away with the tying goal.

There was plenty of bitter feeling in evidence during the game. In the third period Bill Cowley took a punch at "Hap" Day and a near riot ensued . . . Peggy O'Neil went after "King" Clancy, and Eddie Shore selected big "Chuck" Conacher as his pet hate.

* * *

Springfield Indians and Philadelphia Ramblers will probably play at the Boston Garden tomorrow night. There's about nine feet of flood water in the West Springfield Arena, and President Lucien Garneau of the Indians is anxious to transfer tomorrow's game to Boston. The Indians and Ramblers should prove a fine attraction, especially in view of the fact that a Philadelphia victory would keep the Bruin Cubs in the running for one of the Canadian American League play off berths.

The Cubs packed too many guns for the New Haven Eagles last night, and moved back into a third place tie with the Indians by chalking up a 4 to 1 victory . . . Although he was beaten for four goals, Alfie Moore, the Eagle goal minder turned in one of his greatest performances . . .

C. F. Adams, president of the Bruins, has awarded the president's cup to John "Red" Beattie "for faithful, persistent and effective services" . . . On Sunday night, before the opening face off of the Bruins - Ranger game, President Adams will present this beautiful trophy to "Red" . . . Tiny Thompson, Eddie Shore, "Babe" Siebert and "Dit" Clapper are the previous winners of the president's cup . . .

Ross May Make Definite Offer For Bruins on Return

Detroit Red Wings voted Tiny Thompson the best goal tender in the N. H. L. and also selected Capt. Eddie Shore on their first all-league team . . .

Pres. Adams paid Paul Runge a very fine compliment last night when he was informed that his second string left winger had tied up the Maple Leaf game . . . . "I'd just as soon see Paul Runge in front of an opponents' cage under such circumstances as any member of the Bruins," said Adams . . .

Shortly after the close of last season, "Red" Dutton invested $20,000 in the New York Americans and was appointed to succeed Joe Simpson as manager . . . The Dwyer interests may be out of the Americans entirely before the opening of the 1936-37 season . . . Young Bill Dwyer, who had traveled with the club for years, did not go on the road this season. Moreover he absolutely refused to represent the club at the N. H. L. meeting, during which plans for the playoffs were the main issue . . .

Art Ross may be in a position to make C. F. Adams a definite offer for the Bruins when he returns from Montreal . . . Most of the local interests, excepting the Garden, of course, who are supposed to be angling for the Bruins, have been trying to make the deal with conversation.

Red Wings clinched the American Division title by defeating the Blackhawks, 5 to 3, in Detroit . . . It was the first win the Wings scored over the Hawks on Detroit ice this season . . . With a goal and three assists, Marty Barry improved his individual standing . . . Ag Smith was assigned to work in the Bruin Maple Leaf game, but he got himself lost in the floods and was unable to reach Toronto.

'Eskimo' Golfers Open Season

The "Eskimo" Golfers, after a forced layoff of eight weeks because of the snow and ice clinging to the fairways, will continue their schedule this week-end with matches this afternoon and tomorrow at the Norfolk Golf Club, Dedham.

Despite the heavy rains of the early part of the week the greens and fairways are in excellent condition and the "boys" will have plenty of opportunity to loosen up their muscles.

Tony Scarpati Passes Away

Brooklyn, March 20 (AP)—Tony Scarpati, Brooklyn welterweight boxer, died today in Bushwick Hospital from a skull injury received in a recent bout with Lou Ambers of Herkimer, N. Y.

Scarpati's head struck the ring floor when he was felled Tuesday night by Ambers just before the bell at the end of the seventh round. He suffered a fractured skull and a brain hemorrhage.

The 22-year-old Brooklyn fighter was taken to the hospital after two physicians were unable to revive him in the dressing room. He did not regain consciousness.

Top Row Totes 124 In $10,000 Handicap

San Francisco, March 20—Top Row, recent winner of the Santa Anita handicap, will tote top weight of 124 pounds in the $10,000 added Marchbank handicap at Tanforan track, April 11.

The Baroni colt will pack six pounds more than Azucar, winner of the first Santa Anita a year ago.

Sarasota, Fla., March 20 (US)—Jerome Herman "Dizzy" Dean, eccentric St. Louis Cardinal hurler, today vigorously denied reports that he had signed a Cardinal contract.

While branding these reports as "absolutely false," Dean admitted having a conference with Branch Rickey, vice-president of the Cardinals. Dean is holding out for $40,000.

HEARST Musketry Tourney UNDER WAY

By Lieut.-Col. Jess Kreuger

New York, March 20 (US)—Citizen soldiers of every National Guard regiment in the country are today testing their marksmanship on huge silhouette targets in competition for the militia's most coveted prize, the William Randolph Hearst trophy.

The rifle contest calls for the soldier's advanced type of marksmanship training which, in the army, is known as musketry.

Each guardsman fires his weapon as an individual in a group, under the direction of a leader, at a target representing a variety of landscape such as might be expected under battle conditions.

There are two phases to this competition, regimental and national matches.

Every company of all infantry regiments enters a team of five men, and the outfit making the highest marks wins. The national championship is determined by a final match between all winning regimental teams.

Last year the championship was won by a team from Company E, 164th Infantry, North Dakota National Guard, with a final score of 194 75.

The runner-up was Company F, 122d Infantry, Georgia National Guard, with a score of 193.75.

The excellence of this performance may be judged from the fact that a possible score is 200.

All firing is conducted under the supervision of the National Guard bureau and the results sent to Washington in sealed containers. Firing will be completed by March 31.

In addition to the Hearst musketry trophy, which remains in the possession of the winning team for one year and must be then surrendered to the next champions, gold medals are awarded to the individual members of the championship team and bronze medals to the leading quintet of each regiment.

FIVE Posts Open ON B. C. NINE

Fierce competition for all but three positions on the Boston College baseball team features the practice sessions in Commonwealth Armory.

Aside from the berths of the three veterans, Catcher Charlie Fallon, Second Baseman Captain Tim Ready and Outfielder John Terry, the other spots are wide open, and 27 candidates are batting for them.

Eleven hopefuls are batting for the first base berth alone, the same number are out for the mound corps, but only three reported for shortstop, six apiece for second and third base and four for catcher.

Tom Brennan, varsity footballer for three years, but a baseball outfield candidate up to this year, surprised by reporting for the initial sack and was tried with the first infield by Coach McCrehan.

Brennan is noted as a slugger and as such has the jump on the rest of the first base aspirants.

Bill McFadden of last year's freshman nine and Dick O'Donnell, reserve first baseman of last year's varsity, are closest to Brennan for this post.

Sophomores predominate in the large number of candidates for the Gold and Maroon team.

McCoy Looks Over Sophs Tomorrow

Sophs will predominate tomorrow afternoon when the Husky varsity baseball candidates take to the open for the first time since they reported.

Coach Al McCoy is particularly anxious to find out what kind of material he is going to have for his hurling corps.

Only one veteran returns from last season's campaign, and that one only served in a relief capacity. This veteran is Joe Chrusz, captain of the undefeated grid eleven and an outfielder who became a pitcher last season.

Bowdoin Cancels School Track Meet

Brunswick, Me., March 20—Bowdoin has been forced to cancel its 24th annual interscholastic track and field meet, scheduled for tomorrow, because of flood conditions.

Thirty four schools had entered nearly 300 athletes in the meet.

Amateur Elite In N. E.'s

The New England A. A. A. U. will stage the annual New England boxing championships Monday night at the Arena with competition in all eight championship classes. The entry list will be made up of Rhode Island, New Hampshire and Massachusetts champions, together with the qualifier in each class of the four tryout tournaments that were sponsored by the Irish-American A. A.

A strong group of amateur boxers will battle for the title on Monday night in the 147-pound class: George Martin of Boston, state champion; Ralph Zannelli of Providence, Rhode Island champion; Jackie Capparell of Roxbury, one of the finest looking amateur welterweights seen in Boston in years; Billy Connerty of Jamaica Plain, James J. Griffin of Lawrence, the slugging 147-pounder who knocks all opposition, and Fred Cabral of Cambridge.

There will be one more entry in the class, the winner of the New Hampshire State championship at Manchester tonight.

The light heavyweight class will show plenty of likely looking boys in Roy Kelley of Brookline, State champion, Alex Belushko of Cambridge, one of Kelley's closest rivals.

N. E. FANS Loyal to RED SOX

Win, lose or draw, the Boston Red Sox continue to hold a warm spot in the affections of thousands of New England fandom.

A glance at the selections in the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser opening day line-up guessing contest is proof conclusive.

Nor do our contestants pay too much attention to the day-by-day changes as instituted in the Sox line-up by Manager Joe Cronin. They feel that he is experimenting and therefore are matching their wits against him in the matter of the eventual Fenway Park opener line-up.

Ernest LaPlante, 415 Cartier street, Manchester, N. H., sees the Sox a heavy-hitting team. Here's his ideas:

Werber, 3b; Almada, lf; Cramer, cf; Foxx, 1b; Cronin, ss; Cooke, rf; McNair, 2b; R. Ferrell, c; W. Ferrell, p.

Albert Amico, 33 London street, East Boston, has different ideas on the subject as follows

Cooke, lf; Cramer, cf; Manush, rf; Foxx, 1b; Cronin, ss; Werber, 3b; McNair, 2b; Ferrell, c; Marcum, p.

GENTLEMEN

WE THANK YOU FOR WAITING

You have demonstrated your knowledge of good whiskey—both you who buy, and you who sell Glenmore brands—by piling up a demand which we are as yet unable to meet.

Many thousand cases behind our orders—every day during the past five months—we are doing everything possible to meet your needs.

We have increased our bottling facilities, we have increased our distilling capacity, in order to help catch up, and to provide an adequate future supply. A 24-hour working schedule has become our regular daily diet of toil.

We distill, age and bottle every drop of Glenmore whiskies. We refuse to reduce age. We refuse to purchase whiskey on the outside and bottle it under our own Glenmore labels. Every bottle of every Glenmore brand is genuine Glenmore-distilled and aged. We have never let you down.

Time is the essence of the making of Glenmore—time in the fine old distilling methods, time in the ageing in mountain oak barrels, deep-charred by the old bonfire process. And we refuse to hurry it.

Your preference for 18 year old Kentucky Tavern straight whiskey bottled in bond under supervision of the United States Government—

—for Glenmore's rich 16 months old straight whiskey with full flavor, full fragrance, full 100 proof strength,

—for Tom Hardy, fine mellow blend of straight whiskies, —for the exceptional values in those moderate priced straight whiskies, Mint Springs and Two Naturals—has given them leadership in their respective classifications. We will not jeopardize that leadership by lowering quality.

We ask you to be patient a little longer. We again beg your indulgence for the delay, which after all you created by your generous patronage.

Pity The Poor Referee

By Jack Conway

SPEAKING of news: Ted Tonneman, famous wrestling referee, in company of Edna Christiansen of Racine, Wis., looking for a preacher. Miss Christiansen is manager of the City Auditorium at Racine and made a special trip East for the wedding ceremony.

The last seen of Tonneman was when he stepped into an auto on Tremont street, accompanied by Miss Christiansen.

Mr. Boston

"I'm looking for a preacher," confessed Ted. The referee, who has remained calm while roaring crowds have stormed around wrestling rings admitted he was just a bit nervous.

* * *

George Underwood tells me that the late Dr. Norman Harris of Revere, veterinarian at Wonderland Park, owned three fine racing greyhounds which will now probably be sold.

George added that Dr. Harris with a record of a moose every year over a 20-year period, was one of the finest hunters in Massachusetts.

* * *

George's boy Ray, according to Bill Grimes, proved himself a chip of the old block when he won third place in the 1500 metre event at the New England track championships at Providence. George was an Olympic star.

* * *

NICK LUTZE

NICK Lutze telling me he is a cinch to win from Yvon Robert at the Garden next Friday night. He does not believe Robert has the fire or vitality to stand up under the grueling pace he will set.

"O'Mahony didn't crowd Robert as I will," declared Lutze. "Danno permitted the Frenchman to set his own pace, and as a result Robert didn't tire.

"I'm faster than Yvon and a much better wrestler. I'll pin him, and then get another crack at the Irishman."

* * *

Lutze stated he is holding his weight around 200 pounds. At this notch he does not have to worry about his ability to mix things with the best of the big fellows.

* * *

Nick explains his ability to punch with his right hand to the fact he used to be a heavyweight boxer. He gave up boxing to become one of the great stars of wrestling.

Lutze and Robert will have to wait some time before they can possibly obtain a bout with O'Mahony. The latter is on his way to Chicago for a bout, and he will then hop to the Northwest for a series of matches Jack McGrath has arranged for him.

Jack Dempsey and Jack Sharkey will make appearances at the Club Chesterfield after the Garden bouts tonight.

RED SOX

LET US hope that the poor showing of the Red Sox in their Grapefruit league games is due to the fact the players have been slow in rounding into condition, and not because some of them are on their way out as stars.

The Sox have an old ball club in the matter of years and it would not be good judgment on Joe Cronin's part if he were to tear down on them from the opening of the training season.

It is better to permit expensive baseball brica-brac to get ready for a hard season by slow stages.

* * *

The Red Sox possess terrific offensive strength, and the stars are certain to get hitting. The 1936 story of the Yawkey-Collins-Cronin team will be told in the effectiveness of the club's pitchers.

* * *

The Werber situation has not helped the morale in the Sox camp. Werber refused to sign a fair contract [illegible] to him by the club and then rejected at Sarasota, Fla., where he did a great deal of unwise and unnecessary talking.

Werber may be a good ball player, but he certainly has not done anything to help conditions within the ranks of the Sox.

If Werber at times wasn't such a brilliant base runner I do not believe Yawkey and Collins would keep him on their payroll. They could trade him to advantage to at least two American league clubs.

O'Hara Gives Rockingham Four Days

By Bob Ahearn

Jim Bush, Tom McCoy, Jr., and Cedric Fauntleroy, new Rockingham owners, came to town on a flying visit to confer with Suffolk and Narragansett officials.

As a result Rockingham's spring meeting will run from May 25 to June 16, while the fall session is listed for September 28 to October 22. This is a total of 42 days.

Walter E. O'Hara has sliced four days from his list while Suffolk is expected to follow suit with three. Then all three major ovals in this section will avoid a conflict in dates.

Both Allan Wilson, Suffolk's head man, and Gansett's Walter O'Hara have co-operated 100 per cent with the new owners of Rockingham.

Bowling Entries Close Tomorrow; Huntington Club Sends 235

By Walter Kiley

Tomorrow, the zero hour.

With the tolling of Saturday's midnight, entries close for the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser bowling tourney.

Just one last chance to get in under the wire or be a part and parcel of the greatest bowling success in New England history.

Talk about your heavy floods throughout the East, all you want. They don't compare with the steady streams of bowling enthusiasts who are swamping the American-Advertiser today.

For instance, Jack Stafford, proprietor of the Huntington Club Alleys in the Back Bay, sends along a batch of 235 of his regular customers.

This qualifies Stafford and Huntington Club as the largest contributor of the entire tourney.

Next we want to doff the chapeau to Joe Grant, bossman at Norfolk Downs Alleys, to Steve Powell of the [illegible] Alleys in East Boston, to [illegible] major domo of the [illegible] Alleys, to Joe Ruth [illegible] of the [illegible] area Recreation Alleys and to that great host of owners and [illegible] who have labored hard and long to put this event across in big time fashion through sheer love of the game.

Among the surprise donors of trophies today we find the name of Dr. Thedore Sai[illegible] president of the Houston Dental Company on Washington street, Boston, a rabid bowler at Rubbico's Recreation Alleys in Jamaica Plain.

Bond Clothes, through the fine generosity of Manager Richman, donates a suit of clothes and a good one, too, a most acceptable prize. Not only that but Bond Clothes will send along two of its teams from its Washington street store to battle for honors.

M. R. Barbadora, treasurer of Colt Shoes, Inc., 657 Atlantic avenue, Boston, presents us with several pairs of "Colt Imperial" Shoes, fine, high grade products which any man would be proud to wear.

Not content with offering two expensive Gotham wrist watches, the new insured kind which gives the owner a new Gotham free in case of loss through holdup or burglary, and a Shick razor as well, Washington Jewelry Company of Boston promises to contribute several more valuable awards before many more days have passed.

But reemember, bowlers, zero hour tomorrow on entries.

BRUINS

Tie Leafs, Enter PLAYOFFS

Toronto, Ont., March 20 (UP)—A hustling, clawing gang of Boston Bruins held Toronto's fast stepping Maple Leafs to a 2-2 tie in overtime at the Arena here to clinch a Stanley Cup playoff berth.

The tie left no hope at all for the New York Rangers, who meet the Bruins in Boston next Sunday.

Boston has a two-point lead over the last-place Rangers and win, lose or tie, the Bruins are in.

League rules provide for the team with the most victories gaining the playoff berth in case of a tie.

The terrifically fast pace of the first two periods resulted in a fistic outburst in a hectic third period.

The fight started between Bill Cowley, of the Bruins, and [illegible]

Half way down the hall he met Nettie Cooper coming up. She was in street clothes, and her face was flushed and moist.

"What ARE you doing now?" she asked in a voice that quivered with irritation in spite of its gentle patience.

"Goin' home," he said shortly.

"But you CAN'T go home."

"If you mean I can't go home in these clothes, I guess you [illegible] made a mistake, Nettie. I know you bought 'em for me [illegible] but you had no business [illegible] up my own good suit [illegible] so at the time."

"It isn't the clothes. What do I care about the clothes? [illegible] you just can't go, Elbert. [illegible] can't. If you have any real business up there, why, I'll have somebody drive you up and bring you back. Though why should you think you have to go back—"

"Nettie," the old man said, "ain't anybody ever told you you're a durn bossy woman? But I bet you was soft as butter when Dolph was around. Dolph [illegible] take anybody's back talk. Not him!"

CHAPTER 603

THE captain of the state troopers seemed to fly through the air to his waiting car with the announced intention of chasing the men who had just flashed a light upon the bank doorway and then fled.

Mrs. Graham [illegible] said decidedly: "I'm sitting in front with her the same as we did coming over. We need you boys in the back ready to fight at the drop of the hat,' only I don't think anybody is going to drop the hat now."

"Which way shall I go home?" I [illegible]

"Wait a second or two before you start in any direction," she said. "But when I give the word, drive [illegible] down this street, as if you were going over the turnpike [illegible] way. Then when you reach that [illegible] station, whip to the right [illegible] the tracks and drive [illegible] the Seaview road. [illegible] the hotel, where [illegible]

"Tell Miller in a low tone to watch [illegible] as he follows us. He may have to turn in a split second. Tell him to look out for possible followers, too. He will know what to do. And hurry back."

Bob vaulted lightly to the sidewalk, ran to the other car, delivered his message and was back almost in the split second Lillian had named for Miller. As soon as he was safely in the car Lillian, with a final glance at the house across the street, said: "Now," and I sent the car racing down the road.

"What do you expect?" I asked at last, unable to endure the tension any longer.

"I don't know," she returned. "But you remember, the state trooper said there were two cars near the bank tonight. Yet only one appeared, and I'm still puzzling over that fool trick with the flashlight."

She suddenly stiffened.

"There are the lights of a car rounding that last turn behind us and coming like a bat out of hell. We're pretty near the hotel. Get in there as fast as you can."

Penalty DOUBLES of Low CONTRACTS

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

One of the most difficult lessons for the less-than-expert player to learn is the penalty double of low contracts.

Despite a great deal written on the subject, the belief still persists that in order to double one or two of a suit, a great many trumps are vital.

This is diametrically opposite the truth. Penalty doubles based on a long string of the opponent's trump declaration and little or nothing else are very seldom effectual.

In today's hand South had only the Queen and two small diamonds against East's two-diamond overcall. Yet he [illegible] doubled for penalties and was lavishly rewarded.

North dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	2 ◇	Double	Pass
Pass	Pass

East's overcall was of the type that is more common than wise. His 2½ honor-tricks could by no means compensate for his dearth of sure playing tricks at an eight-trick contract.

Very few players would double on South's hand, I fear. Yet this is the proper bid. South cannot be sure of making a game—he lacks support for his partner's bid, has no very good suit of his own and is naturally afraid of no-trump with only one stopper in diamonds.

Moreover, he knows that if he happens to hit a very long diamond suit in East's hand and the contract is made, no great catastrophe has occurred, since two of a minor doubled is only 80 points. And as a final criterion, penalty doubles being cooperative, North can always take it out if his hand is unsuited to a diamond defense.

The spade was opened and North [illegible] off three rounds before shifting to the low heart. East went up with the King. South won the Ace and returned a heart. North's Queen won. After two rounds of clubs North was back on lead and led the fourth spade. South ruffed with the Queen and later, North's Jack of trumps had to be conceded by the declarer. In all the defenders took nine tricks for 1100 points penalty.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

Mental Gymnastics Take Few Calories

By IDA JEAN KAIN

Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Mental gymnastics are no substitute for the daily dozen. Do you know how few calories it takes to play your best game of bridge for two hours?

Well, you burn about 100 calories per hour just sitting; mental activity increases this amount by about 4 per cent, using a measly 208 calories in the two hours.

Reaching for the bonbon dish is probably the most strenuous exercise you get during the afternoon. And the total calories needed for two hours of intense mental effort would be supplied in two chocolate creams.

So calories go a long way toward making and marring the feminine figure. After the game is over, you more than offset your afternoon's low energy expenditure by the consumption of high-calorie foods. With no trouble at all you nibble from 500 to 1,800 calories.

Brain work and nervous tension are two different stories. The thin nervous person on nail [illegible] tenters [illegible] burns calories even when sitting.

The only way to outfigure the calories is to exercise. Walk away the pounds. Walking slow, at the rate of two and one-half miles an hour, uses 155 calories. The faster you make your movements the more you increase your activity and the higher is your energy demand for calories.

If you walk at a moderate rate of speed, say three and three-fourths miles per hour, you burn 2[illegible] calories per hour. But clipping it off at the rate of five miles an hour utilizes 460 calories!

These figures are taken from tables compiled by Dr. Mary Swartz Rose of Columbia University. In this article the figures are based on the energy requirements of a woman weighing 125 pounds. With higher weight there is a slight increase in the calories used.

Send for the calorie chart and the general exercises to keep you trim and fit as a fiddle. The chart will tell you the number of calories contained in various foods, and the general exercises, plus your daily walk, will help you to turn calories into energy. Be sure to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Patience Wasted on the Husband Who Is Slave to Liquor

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The wife who tolerates a drunken husband is inviting life-long martyrdom. Her situation will grow more and more unbearable as times goes on.

My advice to all women whose husbands make a habit of becoming intoxicated is BE FIRM. Don't argue or quarrel while men are under the influence of liquor, but as soon as they recover their senses, LAY DOWN THE LAW.

I don't care what others say. They can offer all the excuses they wish. Still I shall always contend that habitual intoxication is SURE PROOF of mental weakness. Either the person who drinks to excess is a born coward who requires alcoholic stimulation to give him FALSE courage or he suffers from some more serious malady which needs immediate medical attention.

If I were the wife of a drunkard, I'd make it clear this very day that he would have to choose between ME and LIQUOR. I'd tell him definitely and emphatically that he could not have both of us. And I'd act with the knowledge that every law of Church and State would support me.

Excuses and pardons do not work with the drinking husband. They only pave the way for the next offense.

The winner of the five-dollar award for today's best problem goes to Mrs. X., whose husband has made life unbearable for her. She writes:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

How can I handle a man who is constantly drinking? I am the mother of five children and I need every penny of the money my husband is throwing away on liquor. He gets a good salary, but the most I ever see of it is ten dollars a week.

I think I could tolerate my husband's drinking if he did not make a practice of returning home and acting like an insane man. The children and I are frequently scared almost out of our wits. And we've more than once been forced to take refuge in our neighbors' homes.

Is there anything I can do to change my husband and to save my marriage?

MRS. X

MY DEAR FRIEND

You've read my advice to wives of husbands who drink. Profit by this advice, I implore you. Tell your husband that you will tolerate his intoxication no longer. A man who denies his wife and children the necessities of life and spends his earnings to satisfy his alcoholic thirst is not worth any consideration.

Be emphatic. Let him know NOW that you have suffered all you intend to suffer. Give him one more change to reform. And show him that you mean business.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I am one of the many forgotten mothers who live (God knows why) to clutter this earth. I was dependent on my only child's love and loyalty, and when she married I was sure she intended to share her home with me.

With this in mind, I sold all my furniture while she was on her honeymoon. But when I went to her new home with my trunk, she met me at the door, saying "Sorry, Mother, but you took much for granted. We cannot have you here."

What shall I do, Miss Fairfax? I am broken-hearted and I don't know which way to turn. You see, I am not old enough to obtain a pension and I am too old to obtain a job.

A FORGOTTEN MOTHER.

DEAR MOTHER,

Go to your daughter and tell her she will have to contribute toward your support. You worked for her, raised her from babyhood, and enabled her to be sufficiently attractive to win the love of the man who became her husband. Now it is her duty to repay you.

Don't think you're asking for charity. You're not. You're merely asking your daughter to return to you a little of what you gave her. It's a debt which you've got every right in the world to collect.

I have no sympathy on those young people who refuse to assist their parents. Usually they are selfish and they seldom amount to much.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Match Your Make-Up to Your Eyes

[illegible]

By ARLINE GOULD

WHAT is it all about [illegible] new beauty [illegible] "choose your make-up by the color of your eyes"?

Just that and nothing more. Whether you know it or not nature has given you a definite personality color, a color exactly matching the skin and hair pigmentation, a color that stays the same from childhood on—the color of your eyes.

Cognizant of the part color is playing in cosmetics and fashions today, a famous Fifth avenue salon has developed a new beauty science—a science of matching the four major eye colors (blue, brown, gray and hazel) to four complete matched make-up ensembles.

These complete make-up kits with harmonizing shades of face powder, rouge, lipstick, eye shadow and [illegible] are definite answers to a [illegible] felt need. How do they differ from other make-up? The answer is simple.

Look in any woman's handbag or take a peep at the cosmetics on her dressing table. What do you find? Powder she bought one day in a hurry. Rouge of another brand. Lipstick that doesn't match [illegible] a mixup jumble of make-up. How could there be harmony and blended beauty with such a hit and miss method of choice?

Every woman knows that her eyes are her most mobile, most animated, most vital and personal feature. Cut apart a portrait and which feature do you find the dominant one? The eyes, of course.

Take for instance the case of a Nordic blonde with blue eyes, golden hair [illegible] and a pure Irish type with black hair and blue eyes. You find that they look equally well in the same make-up [illegible] for their blue eyes are their basic, determining personality color.

For proof of the new make-up science, the manufacturers have made hundreds of tests on blondes, brunettes, young girls and middle-aged women. The tests, they claim, all revealed that the color of their eyes were [illegible]

NO WONDER THEY'RE TALKING ABOUT HEINZ SOUP SUCCESS!

GOOD cooks the nation over agree that the best "homemade" soups in America come out of cans labeled "Heinz"!

Thousands say it is a waste of time and effort to make soup at home. In countless kitchens the traditional family soup kettle has disappeared completely.

Small wonder that people everywhere are talking about the success of these soups. Heinz chefs have accomplished something entirely new. They have duplicated, from home recipes, the most delectable soups anyone has ever tasted. And they have sealed these savory creations piping hot in tins of convenient size.

Heinz Home-Style Soups are made in individual open kettles—in small batches, slowly simmered, carefully stirred, expertly seasoned. Ingredients are of choice table grade. Give your family a treat. Serve your favorite soup—as made by Heinz—some evening soon. Each Heinz Soup is fully prepared. Nothing need be added. Just heat and serve—win a hearty round of applause.

"COSTLY THY HABIT AS THY PURSE CAN BUY"

WHEN the trees put on their garments of green and country gardens are a riot of color, the impulse comes to man, too, to dress up and to look his best.

Shakespeare knew what he was talking about when he made one of his characters say: "Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy . . . for the apparel oft proclaims the man."

Good clothes may not increase a man's ability, but they help a man to "sell" his ability at a higher price.

The world is inclined to judge by appearances.

New clothes, too, are an inspiration to the wearer and a tonic to the spirit. They create confidence and stimulate the mind. "Papa" Haydn, the composer, always put on his "white tie and tails" when writing his music. To dress up made him perk up—and filled his mind with melody.

DON'T POSTPONE LIVING—MAKE 1936 A HAPPY YEAR

BOSTON AMERICAN

Edited for People Who Enjoy Living

A HEARST NEWSPAPER

COURT CUSTODY FOR BABIES

San Francisco, March 20 (US)—Broken hearts, empty arms—the scale of human emotions was run as the juvenile court took custody of two little babies Mrs. Linda Jones had given away.

Little two-year-old Marion Edward "Sonny" Jones, Jr., one of the gift babies, left alone in the detention home nursery when the law had ground out its decision, toddled into the next room where he could hear his two-months-old sister crying, and lisped:

"Don't cry, sissy—Don't cry. Look, Sonny's here—don't cry."

The decision, rendered by Mrs. Mary Kohler, referee of the juvenile court, was swift in its threefold effect:

1—It decreed that the two gift babies should be transferred to the jurisdiction of the juvenile court of San Mateo County, the father's legal residence.

2—It snatched the infant Dolores from the armsm of Mrs. Frances Simonsen, who had wished to adopt the baby and rear it as a foster sister to her little son Jackie, five.

3—It denied Mr. and Mrs. Iver Nelson the right to keep the other gift baby, Sonny, given them by Mrs. Jones two weeks ago. As Mrs. Kohler announced her decision, the 22-year-old mother cried:

"They can't do this—they can't take my babies away from people who would have given them good homes and wonderful care. Look at them now—they're in an institution, among strangers. I'll fight this decision."

Martha Gives Vegetable Recipes

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

It's the vegetables we serve and the way we serve them that add color and appeal to meals. Necessary nutritionally they are equally important aesthetically.

As a result of modern methods few vegetables have the short seasons common in the past for their enjoyment. Even corn, the last to be packed in vacuum tins successfully, can be enjoyed all year long from the [illegible]. [illegible] asparagus from California [illegible] greens, traditional [illegible] season, are making their appearance at 25c to 30c a pound.

Here are a few recipes for [illegible] the serving of the common onion, cabbage and sweet potato.

CREAMED FRIED ONIONS

1 pound Bermuda onions
Fat for pan frying
2 tbsps. flour
1½ cups milk
Salt and pepper

Peel and slice the onions; fry slowly in hot fat until tender and quite brown. Add more fat as needed and turn the onions frequently. Scrape together and loosen all the brown crisp parts clinging to the frying pan. Sprinkle with [illegible] mixed. Add hot milk. Stir and cook until thick and the sauce has boiled up once. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Serve with meat balls, beef loaf, steak or as a luncheon dish on toast.

STUFFED EGG PLANT

1 medium-sized egg plant
1 pint finely cut cabbage
½ tsp. salt
1 tbsp. butter
2 tbsps. chopped peanuts
1 cup fine bread crumbs

Cut egg plant in half. Remove as much of the white portions as possible without breaking the shell. Cut this removed part in small pieces. Cook this with the cabbage in a very little water about 10 minutes. Drain and mix the other ingredients with it. Fill the egg plant shells. Cover with buttered crumbs. Set in a baking dish and pour around them a little of the water in which the cabbage cooked. Bake half an hour in a moderate oven, 350 deg. F. or until brown.

SWEET POTATOES WITH PIMIENTOES

This unusual receipe is the favorite of the Washington Representatives and is served at their informal buffet suppers.

2 lbs. sweet potatoes
1 cup brown sugar
1 can pimientoes
½ cup butter
1 tbsp. cornstarch
Salt

Parboil the peeled sweet potatoes, [illegible] pimientoes. Pour the mixture over the potatoes arranged in a baking dish and bake in a moderate oven, 350 deg. F., for half an hour.

CAULIFLOWER

1 small head cauliflower
½ cup bread crumbs
3 tbsps. butter

Remove the outer green leaves from the cauliflower and wash. Leave whole or break apart into flowerets and cook uncovered in boiling, salted water until tender. Drain and place in a serving dish. Season with salt and pepper. Mix the crumbs and butter in a small frying pan and stir until the crumbs are slightly browned. Sprinkle crumbs and butter over the cauliflower and serve hot.

Other variations are to serve the cooked cauliflower with cheese sauce, with Hollandaise, or with white sauce sprinked with crumbs and cheese. Leftover cauliflower may be broken into small pieces, placed in a shallow baking dish, covered with white sauce and crumbs and a sprinkling of cheese and heated until the cheese melts.

VEGETABLE LOAF

1 head uncooked cabbage
2 or 3 raw potatoes
1 or 2 pieces of celery
2 fried onions
2 eggs
2 or 3 cups whole wheat bread crumbs
Milk to moisten
Chopped parsley
Salt and pepper to season
½ tbsp. butter

Grind or chop cabbage into very small pieces, beat eggs; mix all ingredients except milk. The milk should be added to moisten a little, when the rest of the mixture is well beaten together. Shape into a loaf, put into a greased loaf pan and bake in a moderate oven, 350 deg. F., until browned. Slice and use as meat loaf; or the center piece of a vegetable platter.

WILENTZ TALKS WITH CONDON

Trenton, N. J., March 20 (US)—The spotlight focused again on Dr. John F. "Jafsie" Condon, Lindbergh baby ransom intermediary, as Attorney General David T. Wilentz of New Jersey called on him at his home in New York City on an unexpected errand.

Dr. Condon, charged by Governor Hoffman with contradictory statements since the conviction of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, has refused to come to New Jersey so the Governor can interview him.

Governor Hoffman declared today that he wanted to question Dr. Condon, "with a stenographer present." He indicated he might come to New York for that purpose, adding:

"It will not be a social visit."

Girl's Bed Wrong Port For Drunk

New York, March 20 (US)—It was alcohol—not romance—that caused him to climb into a strange young woman's bed, James Lynch explained in court.

The girl said she was awakened by a man climbing through her window. She arose quietly and when she returned with a policeman Lynch was sound asleep in her bed.

An old playmate lived [illegible] recently, Lynch told Magistrate Solomon, who let him off with a suspended sentence.

FOR DIGESTION'S SAKE—SMOKE CAMELS

L'AIGLON, IN CHICAGO, RENOWNED FOR ITS CONTINENTAL CHARM AND CUISINE. In this famous and delightful place, known for years to connoisseurs of fine foods, Camel cigarettes are a popular favorite with diners. "Teddy," (left) genial host to the lively crowd you see in the picture above, is an internationally famous maitre d hôtel, with an established reputation in England and France as well as in the United States. "We find our patrons know not only good cooking," he says, "they know good tobacco. There is no question but that Camels are the most popular cigarette among L'Aiglon guests."

150-POUND DYNAMO! That's Tommy Bridges, of the World Champion Detroit Tigers. Tommy says: "Ball players have to watch digestion. Upset digestion would throw me off. I like to smoke my Camels during and between meals—find 'em a real aid in helping digestion. Camels set me right!"

WIZARD ON SKIS, Sig Buchmayr, says of skiing: "When taking off or landing, there's often a gripping feeling in the stomach. Frequently digestion is upset. And that's why I smoke Camels. Wouldn't enjoy my food as much if I couldn't smoke Camels while eating and afterwards. It seems to me that after good food there's nothing like smoking a Camel to aid digestion and build up a feeling of well-being."

STEEPLEJACK JOE BECK: "Many a time my stomach tightens in a high spot—but you wouldn't know it from the hearty way I eat. I'm very careful about keeping good digestion—I smoke Camels. They help to stimulate my digestion."

Smoking Camels eases tension—stimulates digestion—and fosters a feeling of well-being!

Again and again, we make up for lost time by eating in a hurry. Digestion must meet the strain. How fortunate that smoking Camels during and after meals definitely stimulates digestion and helps to ward off the effects of our hurried, nerve-wracking life—by aiding and restoring the natural flow of the digestive fluids. Today, the pleasure of smoking Camels is being everywhere recognized as a comforting and healthful part of the art of dining. Camels are incomparably mild. They never get on your nerves or tire your taste. Enjoy Camels with meals and the whole day through, for their matchless blend of costlier tobaccos—for their energizing "lift"—for the welcome feeling of well-being they bring you. Camels set you right! See how much more zest you have in smoking and in eating when you smoke Camels for digestion's sake.

Adventurer's Breath-Taking Experience on the Australian Coast

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

FLOYD GIBBONS

Make room for Pete Gill of New York City. Pete is today's Distinguished Adventurer, and since there's always room for one more of the Adventurers' Club, we won't have any trouble finding a seat for him. Pete is a ship steward—not a steward on a big ocean liner, but the sort of one who has charge of the feeding of the crew on a tramp steamer. That kind of a steward goes a heck of a lot of places and sees a heck of a lot of things. And, usually, he has a heck of a lot of things happen to him, too.

Well, sir, Pete is no exception to that rule. He's had plenty of things happen to him. But the most hair-raising of them all was that adventure in Australia, in the Spring of 1922. His ship sailed out of San Francisco in May, and its first stop was at a port that went by the peculiar name of Rockhampton Meat Works. It was just a canning factory dock, about four miles from the town of Rockhampton on the northeast coast of Australia. Rockhampton itself was only a small town. The whole doggone region wasn't very thickly populated. Between the town and the meat works there was a strip of desert that wasn't inhabited at all.

It was Pete's first trip to Australia and he wanted to see the place, so he decided to take a walk to Rockhampton. Before he left he arranged to meet some of his shipmates in town at a pub run by a man named Jack Oak. He started out about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. And as he left a longshoreman warned him: "Watch out for dingoes. This part of the country is full of them."

Pete had heard of dingoes—the wild dogs of Australia—but he had never thought there'd be any that near the coast. He didn't take the longshoreman's warning any too seriously, but he did cut himself a good stout stick to defend himself with, just in case some of those wild pooches did come along.

Pete walked for about two miles without seeing a sign of any wild animal. He had covered half his journey by then, and he was beginning to think that longshoreman's story was just a lot of horse feathers. Then suddenly he heard a sharp yelp behind him and whirled about. There, not a hundred feet away from him, were six dingoes, their heads down, foam dripping from their jaws, making for him at full speed.

Pete knew better than to try to run from a pack of dogs. That was just what they wanted. A dog is most dangerous when pursuing a fleeing quarry. He stood in his tracks and faced the oncoming beasts, thanking his lucky stars that he had stopped to cut the stick, which he now held poised, ready to swing at the first dingo that came at him.

"In a few seconds," Pete says, "they were on me. I swung the stick and beat the first one off. I had barely time to whip the stick up again when another jumped. I knocked that one down. Then the dogs drew off a bit and began to circle around me."

That was what Pete had been afraid of. Once they began lunging at him from all sides, he would not be able to defend himself. He'd have given anything at that moment for a tree—a wall—a rock—anything he could get his back up against. Anything that would keep those snarling, snapping devils out in front of him, where he could hold them off. But on that flat, sandy stretch of Australian desert there was no shelter for miles.

Behind him a third dog growled and closed in. Pete turned to beat him off, and as he did so another leaped at his throat. If that dog had made it the battle would have been all over—but somehow he managed to get his stick between him and the animal. A fifth dog jumped and tore the sleeve off Pete's coat.

For ten minutes Pete fought on. He didn't get off unscathed, either. That dog that had taken his coat sleeve had taken a little flesh along with it. His trousers were in shreds, and blood was streaming from his fingers, legs and arms. "I was pretty weak from swinging," he says, "and from the loss of blood, although by that time I had almost beaten one of the dingoes to death, they were still coming at me."

Then the battle began to turn in Pete's favor. Two of the dingoes ran away. Another was laid out on the sand half dead from the beating Pete had given it. He made another vicious swing and laid out another dog, but the remaining two still kept coming.

By that time courage began to come creeping back into Pete's body. He began to feel that maybe he could handle those two remaining dogs after all. And then over the top of a sand dune came a man—a native of the country. He raised a rifle and there was a sharp crack. The last two dogs turned and ran, and in another minute Pete was being half carried toward the town of Rockhampton.

The Australian took Pete to Jack Oak's pub, and they put a couple of stiff drinks of brandy into him and tied up his wounds. After that, Pete felt better again. Jack Oak drove him back to his ship in his car, and the ship's doctor did the rest. But here's the joke of the whole business. "If I had only known enough to light a match," says Pete, "I'd have been all right, because the dingoes don't like fire and won't go anywhere near it."

Shoot along those yarns, boys and girls. Tomorrow I'll be telling you the doggondest yarn you ever read. Until then—watch out!

Seek Leading Lady for Next Beery Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, March 20—Where is there an actress who can be teamed with Wallace Beery and furnish the humor and pathos that made Marie Dressler such a loved figure? That's a problem Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer executives have been trying to solve ever since the beloved Marie passed on. During the two years since her death, dozens of potential successors have been named without any of them qualifying.

Now comes a story for Beery by Garret Smith called "Old Hutch" where a woman of the Dressler temperament is needed. But where is she to be found? The role is that of a wife who is faced with the difficult task of inspiring ambition in the laziest man in the South. Wally, who is just back from an Eastern trip, plays this role.

She will furnish the feminine touch in "The Charge of the Light Brigade," which also brings us Errol Flynn, Warners' newest star. One picture, "Captain Blood," put Flynn in the success class.

Greta Garbo cables that she will be back in Hollywood April 15, which is only two weeks later than she was expected. [illegible] when she gets here she will have to wait for a few weeks [illegible] she reads the scripts of [illegible] and "Countess Walewska," both of which are ready for her and will be produced by Irving Thalberg. "Countess Walewska" will very likely be her next picture, but if it is too difficult to assemble the right cast Irving will make "Camille" first.

Chatter in Hollywood: Gary Cooper can thank a Huntington Park audience that he is continuing his vacation in Bermuda. He promised Frank Capra when he left that if any added scenes were necessary he would come back for retakes. But the picture, which is now called "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," went over so well that Capra decided to release it as it is. The Carthay Circle Theater has been taken over by Columbia for next Tuesday night, when the picture will be previewed for the press.

'Folies Comiques' Among Smartest of Revues

Stage Novelties at Boston

By MARION FRENCH

Tres Bien, Oui, Oui and Voila!

What we're really trying to say is that the "Folies Comiques de Paris" which opened at the RKO-Boston Theater yesterday, is a saucy, daring, amusing and sometimes beautiful revue. Furthermore, it's at all times typically French, from the feathers on the show girls' hair down to the gold shoes on the nearly nude male acrobats.

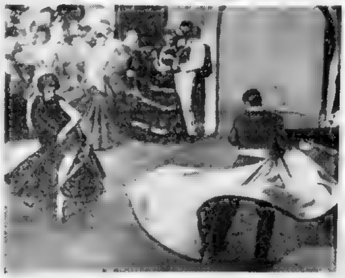
Starting off with a parade of tall stately lilies of the ensemble [illegible] of the mannequin type, the opening number [illegible] the first display of gorgeous costumes which are seen all during the performance. Following this group of statuesque beauties come the smaller girls dressed in blue and white silk aviators' suits on their toes. A handsome male dancer leads the ballet and performs some difficult steps as the girls leave the stage.

Although the lovely Parisian gals occasionally leave off some of the most important garments during the show there is nothing inartistic or offensive about their revelations. On the contrary, their complete nonchalance during the revealing scenes makes such displays as innocent as the strictest censor could desire. And to show how lightly the Boston's early show patrons took these numbers we must admit that the shapely French girls received their greatest applause when they were wearing the most clothes.

The "Folies Comiques" has a number of novelty acts, as is true in all the continental revues. Some of the best of them are the musical clown presentation of Ferry Corway, the Leanders Brothers balancing act, the hilarious dance numbers in which the Cerkos boys partake and M. Evans' juggling performance.

The revue boasts some of the finest dance presentations ever seen in a stage show. One of the most spectacular of these is called "Fiesta" and its costumes, setting and dancing are on a par with any of the better musical comedy presentation. Dolores and Candido, a striking dance team, are the featured dancers in this number.

Another outstanding dance is symbolical of a bull-fight with two male dancers dressed as toreadors tossing a graceful girl about the stage. An ensemble dance that brought much applause was a swan number in which all of the feminine members of the revue appeared.



A little Spanish atmosphere is injected into the "Folies Comiques de Paris," gorgeous stage show at the RKO Boston, in the candid camera study above, as the two dancers, along with another talented member of the cast, present a bull-fight dance specialty.

"Love on a Bet," the Boston's screen attraction, is a light, [illegible] affair with Gene Raymond, Wendy Barrie and Helen Broderick as its leading players. Raymond is seen here as a young man of Manhattan who hitch-hiked his way to Hollywood as part of a bet to raise money to produce a play.

Wendy Barrie has the role of an impoverished debutante also on her way to California. She and her aunt, played with much humor by Helen Broderick, are interested in getting her married to a rich husband on the coast. Of course the young lady's plans are changed when she and the handsome hitch-hiker fall in love on their adventuresome journey, so a happy ending seems in store at the fade-out of "Love on a Bet."

Gala Film Fare for Fans

By MARION FRENCH

Charlie Chaplin's latest picture, "Modern Times," and "Give Us This Night," a musical film co-starring Gladys Swarthout and Jan Kiepura, comprise the well-balanced program at the Paramount and Fenway Theaters this week.

Paulette Goddard, Charlie's lovely fiancee, is his leading lady in "Modern Times." She is surprisingly good in the role considering this is her first screen work. Her part is that of a street waif to whom the little comedian becomes attached when both find themselves at the mercy of a heartless world.

* * *

"Give Us This Night" is one of the smoothest and most delightful of the film operettas to date. Perhaps the fact that it was written expressly for the screen has something to do with its charm. At any rate the singing of two such capable artists as Miss Swarthout and Kiepura is greatly enhanced by their vehicle, which has lyrics by Erich Wolfgang Korngold and Oscar Hammerstein II.

Miss Swarthout looks beautiful throughout the film, and her voice records magnificently, especially when she is singing the part of Juliet during a specially written opera of "Romeo and Juliet" which is presented as a part of "Give Us This Night."

Jan Kiepura makes a romantic hero for Miss Swarthout. His powerful voice is most appropriate for the role of an Italian fisherman who becomes an opera star and his acting is very natural and vigorous. Alan Mowbray furnishes many laughs in his portrayal of a self-satisfied opera singer while Philip Merivale, Benny Baker, William Collier Sr., Mattie Edwards and Chloe Douglas do good work in supporting roles.

Brown Derby Show Hit

One of the sprightliest floor shows of the season, the current "Round-the-World Revue," at the Brown Derby, is adding new laurels to the brow of the Manhattan producer, Jack Pomeroy.

Mackie & LaVallie, knockabout comics, recently returned from international triumphs, head the featured members of the cast, which includes Ed McKinley and Arline Grant, Ann Diamond, popular torch singer; the famous line of Pomeroy Eagle girls gorgeously costumed and singing [illegible] Ben Pullos orchestra and Jack Fay's Rhythm Strings complete the entertainment.

The policy of the management of no cover or minimum charge at either the Olde English or French Canteen bars and the no cover charge policy in the main dining room are meeting with distinct favor.

LEWIS HANEY ON TREND

Trade Recovery WOULD CARE FOR ALL Jobless in U. S.

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, March 20—The President's message asking for "only" $1,500,000,000 as an additional appropriation to WPA is one of his most superficial and disappointing performances. It shows him still clinging to the NRA idea and still stirring people up against the Constitution.

First, he says that the big problem is unemployment.

Second, he says that unemployment is the fault of private enterprises.

Third, he concludes private enterprises can not absorb large numbers of new employes.

He, therefore, argues that the government must give employment and that the Federal government (which he dominates) is the only hope.

Each of these statements is either erroneous or completely misleading.

What are the big problems today? They are (1) the provision for the needy, and (2) the restoration of productive economic activity. The first problem is to feed and clothe the destitute. The second problem is to hasten business recovery, so that all may find productive employment.

Mr. Roosevelt's statement of the case is utterly different from this. Any "thinking person" knows that unemployment is not a cause, but a result. It is the result of the inability of business employers to expand their business. The only way to remedy unemployment is to allow business recovery.

The "needs of the destitute" are another matter. They are needs for food and clothes. And food and clothes must be provided.

But when the government pays a gang for building a road in New Mexico which runs from nowhere to nowhere it is doing two things. (1) It is giving food and clothes to the more or less destitute (?) and (2) it is wasting their labor and our money, and thus preventing the return of the business recovery which would provide real employment.

The big problem is the fact that 20,000,000 persons are "on relief."

Unemployment is not the big problem; it is only a symptom of business depression. It will be reduced to normal proportions when business recovery restores normal business activity.

The President utters the following significant words: "Frankly there is little evidence that employers by individual and uncoordinated action can absorb large numbers of new employes." That statement smacks of either Socialism or Fascism.

We may note how hollow it is to invite, urge, or challenge business employers to give employment if it is impossible for them to absorb large numbers of new employes.

But the main point is that Mr. Roosevelt (or is it Professor Tugwell?) says that there is no hope in individual initiative. What is his evidence? What chance has the system of private enterprise had under his administration? In my opinion the fact that any recovery at all has been made in view of all the burdens and uncertainties shows how potent that system is.

RETAIL Trade Volume EXPANDS

IN SPITE OF FLOODS

By Associated Press

New York, March 20—Retail trade and wholesale markets felt the stimulus of broadened demand during the past week, and consumer spending continued at the best rate in five years, Dun & Bradstreet said today in their weekly business review.

The summary declared that volume expanded in spite of floods and rainstorms, though in some districts the weather conditions tended to curtail retail distribution.

The surge in spring buying was quickened, it was reported, as consumers pressed to cover immediate merchandise needs and Easter requirements.

Although sales of women's dresses, suits and coats increased rapidly, and more attention was given to men's clothing, nearly all departments shared in the enlarged volume for the next week.

* * *

Household furnishings, electric refrigerators, radios, hardware, paints, spring cleaning necessities and athletic goods contributed substantially to boosting aggregate sales.

Excepting the flooded areas, in which business at some centers was brought almost to a standstill, the uptrend of retail sales was extended, gains for the week running to 10 to 15 per cent.

With two of the districts struggling against adverse weather conditions, however, the estimated average of volume for the country was only 8 to 12 per cent higher than for the comparative 1935 week.

With the deferred buying of February released in a constantly mounting volume, most of the wholesale markets reported last year's orders for the comparative week exceeded by 10 to 15 per cent with the gain in some of the apparel divisions as much as 20 per cent.

BULLS Control MARKET

DEVELOPMENTS FAVORABLE

By International News Service

New York, March 20—If flood news can't stop stock market bulls, it's hard to see what will.

Buoyed by the more favorable turn of developments bearing on the European crisis, as well as continued improvement in basic trade indices, constructive leaders chose to disregard reports of wide-spread damage in the stricken flood area and marked up their favorites to new peaks for the advance yesterday.

Motors, oils, metals, farm equipments and a long list of specialties were outstanding.

The new gain of more than 1½ points in industrial averages has lifted this all-important index to within reaching distance of the five-year top established earlier this month, with only a gap of little more than a point ruling at last night's close.

Unfortunately, however, the rails and utilities continue to lag far behind, with the carrier list able to chalk up but a small fractional gain, while the power group actually closed lower on the day.

The setback in the latter index could be traced largely to the sharp decline in American Telephone, which has been in disfavor ever since the FCC began its exhaustive investigation into the company's affairs.

While the market, thus far, has seemingly shown no great concern over possible effects of flood damage on various companies, reports at hand, indicate the curtailment in steel deliveries will have an adverse influence on first quarter earnings.

Likewise, a similar situation confronts certain of the rails, particularly Pennsylvania and Baltimore and Ohio. Observers point out that repairing of washed out tracks, for one thing, will require substantial expenditures for some months to come.

While selected stocks will most likely continue to respond to individual influences, the growing spread between industrials and rails on the chart pattern is a signal for extreme caution.

Curb Short Interest

New York Curb Exchange announced the short interest in all securities as of February 29 was 89,250 shares, against 67,057 January 31.

Dealings Suspended

Committee on listing of New York Curb Exchange suspended dealings in the voting trust certificates for capital stock of Properties Realization Corporation.

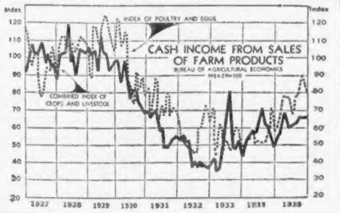
FARM OUTLOOK



BRIGHTER

Commodity Prices Rise

This chart brings together two main sources from which the farmer derives his income and is known in statistical circles as a fever chart.

The causes of the abrupt ascents and decents of the two series is beyond the scope of this article.

However, we may summarize by saying consumer demand, drought, seasonal variations, crop control, and price level have been the most influencing factors in the ups and downs of the lines.

The chart further shows that the two indices, starting in 1930, sagged to the low level in 1933 and then started on the upward trend.

The general recovery of the country on the whole had a steadying effect on crops and livestock in 1935, while poultry and eggs soared to nearly the 1930 level.

The outlook for 1936 is brighter with commodity prices going up and the heavy snows as good insurance against a repetition of the drought.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, March 20—Bush Terminal common sold at a new high for the year yesterday coincident with reports in banking circles that the various parties in the reorganization controversy had settled their differences and would shortly report to the court.

Attorneys interested in the proceedings declined to disclose any details.

It was learned unofficially, however, that the company's guaranty of 7 per cent on the Bush Terminal Building preferred stock was to be recognized and that a plan had been worked out for taking care of the 15 per cent interest arrears on the parent concern's consolidated 5 per cent bonds. Whether this involved dismissal of the reorganization petition now before the court could not be ascertained. The status of both senior securities has been the source of the dispute among the different committees. According to reports, the agreement provides that the common stock will remain undisturbed.

Effect of Rail Gains on Net

While not trying to forecast the probable trend of railroad earnings this year, Weingarten & Co. has prepared an analysis of possible profits of five leading roads on two bases: First, if 1936 gross is 5 per cent above a year ago with 40 per cent of the gain carried to net, and second, if gross is 10 per cent above last year with 50 per cent of the increase carried to net. The analysis is presented in the following table:

	% Inc. In G.	% Car. To Net	Net per Common Share 1936 est.	1935	1934

Oils Celebrate Arrival of Spring

Activity and strength yesterday in petroleum shares was timed with the coming of spring tomorrow. The great interest displayed in the various stocks reflected an anticipated seasonal spurt in gasoline consumption, which is usually accompanied by upward revision of prices. The tendency in this direction has already been initiated by the Socony Vacuum in parts of New England. Another stimulating factor in the oil outlook is the expansion now being reported in the production of new automobiles and the decided increase in the sales of new and used models.

Paramount First Preferred Dividend

Holders of Paramount Publix first preferred stock who had counted on dividend resumption early this year are apparently doomed to disappointment. According to the most reliable authority, directors are unlikely to vote a dividend until midsummer at the earliest. The reason for this delay—in the face of earnings in the first nine months last year twice the annual first preferred requirement—is the necessity for writing-down the high cost of pictures produced last year. This problem is facing the management now. Directors will have to decide very soon whether to make heavy write-offs in the last quarter of 1935 or to let the write-offs come more naturally under the amortization program during the first half of 1936. The write-offs could be heavy enough practically to offset all earnings in the last quarter of 1935, it is understood. Cost of first-grade pictures, however, has been reduced from $700,000 average last year to around $500,000 now. Furthermore, Paramount's film rentals now are running above $1,000,000 weekly, which is 10 per cent above this time a year ago and the highest income since 1931. Theater operation profits are showing a 25 to 30 per cent expansion over a year ago, it is officially stated. Paramount's cash exceeds $18,000,000 at present.

Chances Weighed for Interborough 5s

With or without unification, one bond broker thinks, Interborough 5s are secure as to ultimate payment of principal and continuity of interest payments. Unification would mean, he thinks, that Interborough 5s would be exchanged for oblizations of the city and the board of transit control, and he estimates that if the current plan were put into operation Interborough interest charges would be covered two and a half times. If unification does not come about, and he still has doubts on that score, despite the new conferences scheduled for next week, there is a good chance, in his judgment, that the courts may permit the Interborough to divest itself of the unprofitable Manhattan properties. Even today, he claims, the Interborough could show its charges comfortably covered, were it rid of the Manhattan lease. His attitude toward Manhattan properties is that elevated railroad properties in New York city will eventually be eliminated.

Gold Certificate Withdrawal

The mysterious withdrawal of $2,000,000,000 in gold certificates from the general gold fund of the Federal Reserve System by New York Federal Reserve Bank is officially explained almost two months after it occurred.

Federal Reserve says the withdrawal was made because the New York bank's share in the general "gold certificate fund had become greatly in excess of what has been customary, or what is needed for the purpose of settling the New York Bank's accounts with other reserve banks."

Its action had "no connection with gold exports, actual or prospective."

Since the New York bank's withdrawal on January 24 the Chicago bank has withdrawn $800,000,000 in certificates.

DEFENSE Against Flood NEEDED

RESULTING COSTS HEAVY

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser
(Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service.)

New York, March 20—The rushing of flood waters through Johnstown, Pa., and elsewhere is a vivid reminder that there is still important work for human beings to do in the world.

Recent events demonstrate that the conquest of nature by man's ingenuity is far from a finished job.

With partial recovery, there is a gradual rebirth of man's initiative and inventiveness.

As time moves on, obsolescence and aging create shortages almost more rapidly than full productivity can make replacements.

As business turns more and more to science and research, new and additional secrets will be shaken from the bushes of hidden knowledge.

Talent and inventiveness are again coming into their own, and the rewards and opportunities in the future will be great, as they have been in the past.

Until our national defense against flood waters is made impregnable, we shall be exposed to needless risks entailing immense human and economic cost. It would be vastly cheaper to build the most modern engineering defenses which scientists can devise.

Until every one has a high standard of living, it is wrong emphasis to speak of overproduction.

As affluence becomes more widely diffused, men will then have a choice between more leisure, on the one hand, and more goods, on the other.

In connection with President Roosevelt's plan for introducing a new tax on undivided corporation profits, the question of taxing nonresident alien stockholders in American corporations becomes of increasing importance.

Under the President's plan, existing corporate taxes will be repealed, and on distributed corporation profits the only tax will be in the form of a dividend tax on stockholders.

With alien holdings of American securities larger than ever before in our history, it is important to make sure that the aliens pay a tax.

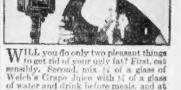
How To Safely
Lose Ugly Fat
"Eat sensibly and drink Welch's Grape Juice," says Irene Rich



WILL you do only two pleasant things to get rid of your ugly fat? First, eat sensibly. Second, mix ½ of a glass of Welch's Grape Juice with ½ of a glass of water and drink before meals, and at bedtime. No strict dieting, exercising, or taking drugs. Yet!—weight losses of 7 pounds a month have been credited to this SAFE method. Use only Welch's—made from the finest grapes grown; always full strength. Certified Pure.

Floods FAIL TO HALT Service

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

While the flood has wreaked untold damage and injury to New England business and industrial establishments telephone communications are holding up in remarkable fashion.

President John J. Robinson of New England Telephone is authority for the statement that of 1,200,000 telephones the company serves only 20,000 can not be reached.

Many of the phone units out of service are known to be in homes that have been abandoned. Traffic throughout the territory has been extremely heavy and a full force of operators stands by to handle calls. Toll line service, Mr. Robinson says, has held up well despite very heavy traffic. Of 10,000 toll lines serving New England not more than 250 were out.

While the immediate dislocation of industry and trade may result in flattening our near term activity indices it will merely defer much larger volume that might otherwise have been expected. The costly work of rehabilitation and reconstruction are still ahead. Much new material, many workers and additional shipping services will be required to fill the needs of the prostrated sections. And it is largely of an emergency nature and will brook no great delay. From national, state, local and private agencies will flow the needed money for the relief of a suffering public, while industry itself must spend generously to restore lost efficiency.

After two weeks of excited and heedless appraisal of sudden news developments the market is disposed to take a quieter view of mixed flood and foreign news. Industrial shares have mounted close to previous peaks but rails remain a good distance from the tops set in the long October-February runup. A good line on probable medium term action is difficult at this point and we will not elaborate on previously expressed views.

The gloomy ones who see stagnation of capital markets and resultant slowing of durable goods industry recovery might well consider the analysis of the situation in the current Administrative and Research Corp. letter. Activity in coming months is seen reaching levels of the middle 1920's and bond and note offerings this month and next are estimated at 1000 million dollars. All of this money is not for refunding purposes. A larger and larger part is new money and goes for new plant and equipment.

Dividends

Commercial National Bank & Trust Co. declared two regular quarterly dividends of $2 each, payable April 1 and July 1 to stock of record March 25 and June 24 respectively.

STOCK Prices Turn MIXED

TRADING QUIET

New York, March 20—The stock market showed varying degrees of firmness today, but a number of issues backed up under realizing.

Trading turned quiet after a brisk and slightly mixed opening. Some of the mines, oils, alcohols and specialties were in demand. Several of the steels, rails, utilities and motors were inclined to give ground.

Gainers of fractions to a point or more included U. S. Smelting, American Smelting, Cerro De Pasco, Standard Oil of California, Texas Corporation, duPont, Johns-Manville, American Radiator and Eastman Kodak.

A loss of nearly 4 points was suffered by American Telephone, and Western Union, Pennsylvania and Case yielded a point or so each.

U. S. Government securities were actively higher and other bonds steady.

Timely Topics

While there was some nervousness still evident over the extent of high water damages and their ultimate effect on the earnings of various corporations, most analysts pointed out that the rebuilding of houses, bridges and the demand for new equipment should stimulate many lines.

Cram's estimated output this week was about 5000 cars ahead of the previous period.

Despite floods and rainstorms throughout many districts, Dun & Bradstreet found that consumer spending this week was at the highest rate in about five years.

Both retail and wholesale markets, the review said, were besieged with demands for spring goods and nearly all departments felt the pressure of Easter purchases.

Interest was shown in the weekly statement of the federal reserve system in which a drop of $620,000,000 in excess reserves was disclosed.

The decline was attributed principally to income tax payments and cash subscriptions to new Treasury securities.

Brokers' loans, which had advanced sharply in the previous week because of government financing, were off $81,000,000 in the week ended Wednesday.

The French franc was off .00¼ of a cent at 6.63 cents in initial foreign exchange transactions. Sterling was ⅜ of a cent easier at $4.96⅝.

Washington Notebook

Washington, March 20 (AP)—Further gains in domestic consumption of whiskey and beer were indicated in the bureau of internal revenue's February figures on tax-paid withdrawals.

For domestic distilled spirits the total jumped to 7,923,887 gallons, compared with 5,650,738 in the same month last year.

Fermented malt liquor withdrawals increased to 2,661,288 barrels, from 2,562,898 in February, 1935.

A substantial increase in exports to Canada during the first month of the operation of the reciprocal trade treaty with the United States was shown in commerce figures by nations for January.

Shipments to Canada rose in value to $26,390,000 from $22,808,000 in January, 1935. Imports from Canada increased to $22,934,000 compared with $19,004,000.

A striking reversal in trends of trade between the United States and China was evident in January figures compared with the like month last year.

With this country buying heavily of tung oil and other raw materials, imports were valued at $8,328,000 compared with $4,166,000 in January, 1935.

Exports remained at a relatively low level. Totaling $2,875,000 against $4,251,000. China's purchases in this country fell off substantially last year as deflation hit her industry on the rise in silver prices.

Bar Gold

London, March 20 (AP)—Bar gold declined 1 penny to 140s 11d (Sterling price equivalent to $35.02.)

Bar Silver

New York, March 20 (AP)—Bar silver quiet and unchanged at 44¾.

WOOL Goods Marts ACTIVE

WOMEN'S WEAR UP SHARPLY

New York, March 20—With cloak and suit markets more active than at any other time this year, sales of women's wear wool goods last week took a sharp upturn, with the result that mills were compelled to withdraw a number of fabrics from sale, having accepted all of the orders they are able to deliver, according to the New York Wool Top Exchange Service.

Stocks of spot merchandise were cleared at full asking prices, and in some cases premiums were realized on desirable goods.

Some cloths were advanced in price, says Exchange Service. Sales covered a wide variety of fabrics, including plaid woolens, mannish suitings, flannels and soft worsted coatings. Orders for women's garments were large, and cutters succeeded in obtaining full mark-ups.

Toward the end of the week several manufacturers lifted prices in order to cover the increased cost of woolen goods.

Men's Wear

Considerable business was also placed on summer goods, chiefly shetland coatings and white and pastel fabrics. Reports of an improvement in retail sales of made-up wool garments were received from the South and Pacific coast, where spring promotions are already under way.

Shipments of garments to these sections were large, indicating that initial stocks are being depleted.

Men's wear markets were quiet. Buyers continued to press for concessions on fall suitings and overcoatings, but were successful in very few instances. Piece goods prices have yet to reach a parity with yarn and wool values. Most of the larger clothing manufacturers have covered initial requirements for the next season and have returned home.

Small manufacturers are withholding contracts on piece goods until they succeed in clearing what stocks of spring clothing they have on hand. Fall clothing lines will be opened early next month and will show advances of about 50 cents per garment on the lower-priced models.

Comments of Brokers

The general list is evidently awaiting a new speculative impulse to induce a trend. Failure of rails to show better rallying power is still principal discouraging feature.—H. D. Comer—Paine, Webber & Co.

Indications now point to a fulfillment of our expectations with respect to a further extension of the current rally to the high levels of March, before encountering any resistance of importance.—J. E. Malloy—Hornblower & Weeks.

For the present there is no change in our opinion that a trading pattern is developing and that spells of weakness should be construed as technical corrections which present buying opportunities.—R. S. Feigus—Prentice, Blaunes & Brady.

From a strictly technical standpoint the market would look better if the rails displayed more strength and if the market were a little less selective—J. S. Wilson-Josephthal & Co.

Trading sentiment remains somewhat jittery and the public holds to a standoff attitude. Consequently, sudden bearish news could have exaggerated influence.—J. P. Shields & Co.

Sizable bulges might reasonably be expected to encounter some supplies as traders discreetly pare down positions. Intermediate swing positions remain worthy of retention, in our opinion.—J. S. Bache & Co.

B. C. FORBES

Britain GIVES AID TO Trade

By B. C. Forbes

President Roosevelt first throws industry into turmoil and alarm over what the administration proposes doing to upset their finances; then demands that industry muster up fresh confidence and spend more money to put men to work.

Reverberations of the explosion caused by his revolutionary taxation bombshell haven't died away before he admonishes industry to exhibit courage—and wants business to take him at his word when he once again offers "co-operation" by the government.

The tragedy is that American business and industrial men have lost faith in presidential pledges.

• • •

What contrasts are appearing in British annual corporation reports and in America's. Read this sample, voiced by Chairman H. Gordon Selfridge at the annual meeting of stockholders in his Mammoth London Department Store:

"Recovery is always hard and the progress made has required a strong and steady pull. The climb back from the conditions of 1931 commenced with the balancing of the budget; confidence became more established; manufacturers and merchants were encouraged and stimulated by the efforts of the national government to foster our leading industries, with the result that this country now occupies the proud position of having a long lead in the world economic recovery."

• • •

Note the expression of gratitude for the true-blue co-operation British business received from the British government.

• • •

Turning to the annual reports now being issued here, what do we find?

Almost every corporation executive feels compelled to voice criticisms and protests. One typical expression by President Lewis H. Brown of Johns-Manville:

"With government spending a great deal more than its income, with governmental budgets continuing unbalanced year after year, there is little hope of reduced taxation, and, in fact, strong probabilities that both corporations and individuals are faced with even greater taxes . . . such increased taxes as we must eventually pay, tend to force up costs and selling prices, limit markets, decrease output, restrict employment and decrease profits and dividends.

"Every stockholder, every employe and every buyer of goods would benefit directly if the total cost of government—local, state and national—were reduced."

• • •

Another example from the annual report of E. I. DuPont De Nemours & Company:

"If the spending programs of our governmental bodies continue at the present unprecedented levels, they will in turn require, to avoid fiscal bankruptcy, the assessment and collection of progressively increasing taxes from everyone including your company and its stockholders.

"To call upon the people for still further funds seems an unnecessary drag upon their endeavors during such trying periods; and it is particularly discouraging to the recuperative efforts if such additional exactions are made to finance huge expenditures for untimely experimental projects which night well await at least a mare healthy condition of business and the public treasury."

• • •

Why this pro-business attitude by the British and the anti-business attitude of our own government? Is it because British merchants and industrialists have wings and ours horns? No.

The British government and British Parliament are composed very largely of men of practical experience, including many who achieved conspicuous success in business before entering public life.

There is today high in power at Washington hardly one man who won conspicuous success in business or industry or finance, hardly one man who ever experience the responsibility of filling thousands of weekly pay envelopes.

• • •

Now America would pass British in the recovery and re-employment race were there in Washington a government as practical, as experienced as constructive, as co-operative as that in Britain!

The Alien Problems

THE alien immigration and deportation problems must be decided on an AMERICAN BASIS.

The motive for national legislation on this subject should be, first, the PROTECTION OF AMERICANS, NOT THE PROTECTION OF ALIENS.

Secondly, the human sympathy angle in such legislation should center on the WELFARE OF AMERICA, not on the welfare of those who have come here to loaf on us, propagate subversive doctrines and defy our laws.

Thirdly, there should be no law on the statute books that merely shadow-boxes with the undesirables who are living among us.

An alien and immigration law should have an inexorable and irrevocable MUST written in EVERY line.

To tamper and palter any longer with this important question is to tamper and palter with the health of our national life.

THE Kerr-Coolidge Bill, sponsored by Secretary Perkins of the Department of Labor, and Immigration Commissioner McCormack, would serve the interests of alien criminals and Communists in our midst and is a DIRECT INVITATION to the worst elements of Europe to pursue their shady lives over here.

It is a DISCRETIONARY STATUTE, not a LAW. It would create nothing but an irresponsible PAROLE BOARD.

This measure, backed by professional sentimentalists and by sympathizers with the ruinous doctrines prevalent in the totalitarian states of Europe, is as full of holes as a Swiss cheese.

By the creation of a super-legal "interdepartmental commission" the Kerr-Coolidge measure would result in the whitewashing of CONVICTED ALIEN CRIMINALS at the discretion of the commissioners.

THE Reynolds-Starnes Bill, on the other hand, is a GENUINE alien and immigration law, drawn TO PROTECT AMERICA.

It is OPPOSED by Communists, Nazis and Fascists, both of the alien-breed and of the native copperhead variety.

The Reynolds-Starnes Bill is MANDATORY on the immigration authorities and the Department of Labor.

It says to those who want to make their homes here, "You must have a clean MENTAL as well as a clean PHYSICAL bill of health."

The Kerr-Coolidge Bill says little, and means NOTHING.

If Congress has the highest interests of the people of the United States at heart, it will pass the Reynolds-Starnes measure and bury the Kerr-Coolidge Bill in oblivion.

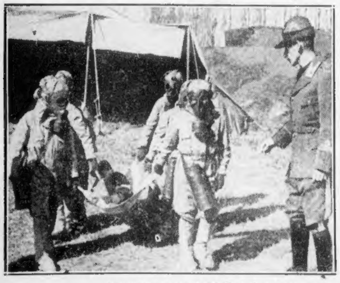
The WPA and Communism

The use of WPA funds to finance lectures on Socialism and Communism is another stain on the unsavory record of the Roosevelt administration. It should be stopped immediately.

Why a man or woman forced to depend on relief money for the necessities of life should be paid with taxpayers' money to discuss and spread theories of governments which have as their purpose the OVERTHROW OF DEMOCRACY and the DESTRUCTION OF THE UNITED STATES defies explanation. Surely no patriotic official or groups of officials would tolerate such a situation.

There are thousands of subjects on which WPA lecturers can talk. An hour spent in any public library will prove this. For these speakers to spread Communist and Socialist propaganda is a little too much like "biting the hand that feeds them."

Italian Children at Play



(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

While American boys and girls enjoy football and baseball, Italian children play a grimmer game. The picture shows a group learning what to do in the event of a gas attack. Looking like tiny robots in their masks and equipment, they are carrying a young "victim" on an improvised stretcher while an adult instructor looks on.

Preparedness is foremost in every country of Europe. Nations almost without exception are ready to defend themselves. Individuals—men, women and children—are also ready.

Americans should study this and similar pictures, especially those so-called Americans who oppose an ADEQUATE army and navy to defend their country.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Three letters. All packed with peeve. The point in each being—Should women respect the value of time?

And have or haven't they the right to feel mortally insulted if you try to make them?

Elsie Robinson

All three letters are from women, and each registers well above 212 degrees Fahrenheit.

The first, tear-spotted, is from pretty little Mrs. Hunt, bride of six months. And why should her husband become so absolutely brutal just because she calls him up at the office two or three times a day? Doesn't he realize it's because she loves him? And has he forgotten that before they were married he kept the wire sizzling himself?

The second is likewise concerned with the office wire. This time it's Widow Davis broadcasting. After a parlous period, the Widow Davis has achieved a little business for herself—interior decorating. Not much of a concern yet—only one tiny ofifce, and she does her own typing. But she's had two or three good jobs, and things would be sitting pretty—

Only all her lady friends insist on dropping in to see her. What about? Nothing. Just to pass the time o' day and gabble a little gossip. But HOW, wails the Widow Davis, can you do business in one little office, with two or three idle friends sitting around, or maybe using your telephone?

NO TIME TO WORK

The third SOS is equally urgent. It's from young Mrs. White, who has ambitions to be a writer. And why not—with no children, just a tiny apartment, and all that time on her hands? So she has enrolled for a correspondence course in journalism. And everything would be going ducky—if the girls would only leave her alone. But they won't! If it isn't Effie on the wire, it's Mabel, and if they aren't planning a matinee, it's a bridge table.

Of course, she had expected them to be like that. She had been like that herself, once. Spent hours and hours on the phone. Dropped anything, any time, just to TALK.

Three dames in distress—and all for what? All because women have been asked to do what any man would do as a matter of course, without being asked . . . i. e., respect the other fellow's time.

If you're reckless enough to make a survey, you'll find that nine out of ten domestic women feel and act the same way about it.

Working women — generally they're different, though I'm not advising you to make any bets on it. But usually the working woman has learned that time is a valuable commodity, and respects it accordingly.

But not so her housekeeping sister! Which is easy enough to understand. Even the most efficient wives and mothers do not work on schedule. Nobody cares whether Willie's pants are patched at 10:45 or 3:15. Nor will the stock market fall if Mom take out three-quarters of an hour, just any old time, to tell Cousin Carrie all about her new Spring ensemble. All of which, as we said before, explains itself. But here's the catch—

A GENERAL FEELING

Even if these ladies don't have to budget their own time, why should they feel mortally insulted because some other woman does?

Why can't little Mrs. Hunt realize that domestic calls in office hours are an abomination and a pain-in-the-neck to any busy man . . . or even to one who isn't busy?

Why can't Widow Davis' friends realize that offices are NOT free parking stations?

Why can't Mrs. White's girl friends respect her determination to make something of herself, instead of deciding that she has gone Up Stage?

They don't—they can't—they won't. Which is reason No. 9365 women still aren't considered people by some of our census takers. So, regardless of which side of the fence you're on, you might think it over, Lady.

New York Day by Day

New York March 20—Thoughts while strolling: Grand quotation from the Oxford Dictionary: "Correct English is the slang of prigs." Kingpin of the Irish smilers: Steve Hannagan. Always expect a sculptor somehow to have a shock of white hair. Perfect artist model for a Rotarian—Bud Kelland.

O. O. McIntyre

Best of the Kipling tributes: "He made words obey him." Imagine Vincent Astor with the first name of Zeke. Or Polly Moran with Hortense. Left at the post, Bing Crosby has caught up in the radio job—indeed is almost out front. Most thrilling radio moment: Helen Keller talking on Rudy Vallee's hour.

Errol Flynn ought to look totsy in one of those white satin-lined Inverness things. That one wheel cyclist, Boy Foy, is a dandy jitters starter. Add expert hecklers: Bill Halligan. No one has attained Diamond Jim's flair for making a dramatic entrance in a restaurant.

Who remembers when a Waldorf head porter had the best paying of the hotel jobs? Study in aristocratic dignity: Anne Morgan.

When fuzzier hats are made, Morris Gest will wear them. Only two out of eleven last night at a dinner knew the meaning of onomatopoeia. No fair looking!

Stuff moderne: Sir Charles and Lady Mendl, the former Elsie De Wolfe, have improved on the 15 years ago marital idea of Fanny Hurst. The Mendls live on separate continents and see each other once a year. Sometimes at their home in Versailles and sometimes the St. Regis in New York.

It strikes me that all juveniles refusing to pass the age of 39 could profit by a study of George M. Cohan's career. The most agile and enthusiastic of the dancing boys, he accepted the inevitable touch of years with becoming adaptability.

And when many winters frosted his thinning hair, he slipped into elderly roles and became the foremost portrayer of the male parent. This winter, for instance, he has been starring in "Dear Old Darling." Rosseau once wrote: "Oblivion is the inevitable harvest of evading the consequence of years."

The original crooner came back to a Broadway floor show a few weeks ago to receive belated acclaim. He was crooning in melodious, murmurous husk when Rudy Vallee was six-year-old Hubert capering around in whatyoucallits, unaware that he and his long parade of imitators would some day be pitty-patting hearts all over the land.

I refer to Benny Fields, long in support of Blossom Seeley in vaudeville. Benny began in the back room of a Chicago estaminet and the metier he originated is exactly the same as that of the crop of crooners that skipped a decade and became a rage.

Now, at 50 and bespectacled, Fields has become ace crooner of a crooning age.

Blossom Seeley, as well as Fields, belongs to the vanishing true troupers of old-time vaudeville. Today she is still a study in the superb sort of showmanship that marks Sophie Tucker, Eugene and Willie Howard and Herb Williams.

She carols coon songs in fiery red gowns, swaying and waving enormous fans and with a precision in timing that suggests clock works.

Vaudeville patrons never tired watching her familiar rigamarole. It was attraction for the routine of the established standard acts that kept vaudeville going long after it was outmoded as entertainment.

Sniffing a scent of Spring today, I went shopping for my seasonal necktie. But from now on I shop alone. I explained to the clerk my liking for a blue polka dot. He inquired if I preferred large or small speckles. The lady with me purred:

"Anything dotty is bound to please him!"

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

This is the time of year when April showers, linen showers and showers of "good advice" begin to fall on the prospective spring bride, and everything looks so rosy and dazzling that she can't see where she's going.

But every girl who is planning to live her life with a man should remember:

That marriage is no longer standardized, but comes in as many varieties as any other kind of "pickle." And it's best to understand beforehand, whether it is going to be a "merger," an experiment or a dictatorship.

That love may not be the only thing there is to marriage, but neither is fire the only thing there is to cooking.

That, while a woman is always thinking (consciously or unconsciously) of "her man," there are eight or ten hours in the day when the average man's mind is as free from any thoughts of a woman as it is from thoughts of murder. And, if he's a golfer, you can add a few more hours.

That no man is a looking-glass; and the average woman's big mistake is her attempt to measure a man's emotional reactions by her own.

That the modern husband may not be so romantic as your grandfather was; but he has his good points. He may not put a woman on a pedestal and think her "an angel;" but neither does he expect her to live up to a halo nor blame her for acting human, once in a while.

That the locks in wedlock are getting a little weak, and will soon have to be changed. But there is no such thing as "lock-less-wedlock," no matter what the modernists may tell you!

Bible Text: "The Lord is my light and salvation whom then shall I fear."—Psalms 27:1-2. Suggested by the Rev. O. R. Fischer, Methodist minister, Boston.

Rothstein's Biggest Bet

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

A recent news item regarding the sale for a song of a piece of suburban property once owned by New York's most notorious gambler of modern times, the late Arnold Rothstein, brings to the mind of this writer many recollections of the activities of that plunger.

Edwin C. Hill

Arnold Rothstein, indefatigable gambler, made many huge bets, but the biggest of them all was the one he made on Hourless to beat Omar Khayyam at Laurel, Maryland, in 1917.

That was the year when two great three-year-olds disputed the championship. Wilfred Viau owned Omar Khayyam, which had captured the Kentucky Derby, and August Belmont owned Hourless, which had won the Belmont stakes. When the two met in the Brooklyn Derby, Omar Khayyam ran away from Mr. Belmont's champion on a heavy track.

They met again soon afterward in the Lawrence Realization at Belmont Park, and in that race Jimmy Butwell, Hourless' jockey, did everything except fall off the horse. He managed to lose his whip and then rode the brown flyer into a pocket—a pocket in a three-horse race! Omar Khayyam just managed to win, even so, poking his nose in front at the wire.

Sam Hildreth, Belmont's trainer, made up his mind to run Hourless against Omar once more and prove that Hourless was the better horse, so he arranged with Colonel Matt Winn, then manager of the track at Laurel, to put on a championship match race between the chestnut and the brown. Many of the older owners and trainers leaned toward Hourless, but some of the young fellows were ready to bet their shirts on Omar Khayyam.

$400,000 WAGER

Betting was tremendous. Omar had begun as favorite, with thousands upon thousands of dollars poured into the ring on him; but the oldtimers of the turf, who preferred Hourless, more than balanced that with their heavy wagers, and when the bugle sounded you had to bet $4 if you hoped to win $3 on Hourless. Or, putting it the other way, if you wanted to win $4 on Omar Khayyam you had to bet only $3.

Among the big bettors at the Maryland track was Arnold Rothstein. The afternoon before the race, he walked up to one of the best known bookmakers in America, a man who had been for years taking any kind of bet offered to him, and who still does for that matter.

"I'll bet you $400,000 on Hourless," said Rothstein.

"Nothing doing," said the bookmaker. "I don't want any part of it."

The next morning, at 6 o'clock, Rothstein's telephone rang. The bookmaker was on the other end of the wire.

"I have changed my mind about that bet," he said. "I have decided to take it."

"Oh," said Rothstein, "so you have decided to take it, have you? I'll tell you. I'll let you know about it this morning just as soon as I can."

It was the day of the race, of course. Rothstein sat there in his room turning things over in his mind. He knew, as duller men would have grasped, that something had taken place between the time the big bookmaker turned down the bet and the time he called up saying he was quite willing to take it.

Something had happened, decidedly. What was it? From a peculiar intimate knowledge of the possibilities, Rothstein thought he knew precisely what had happened, so he did a bold and clever thing. He called Sam Hildreth, Hourless' trainer, on the phone.

"Mr. Hildreth," he said, "you don't know me, but my name is Arnold Rothstein and I am a gambler. I am not asking anything from you, of course, but I have got something to tell you that you ought to know, not only in the interest of Mr. Belmont, but in the interest of the racing public."

SHREWD STRATEGY

Then he told the story of the bookmaker's change of mind, exactly as the incident had occurred. Hildreth listened, thanked Rothstein, and hung up without any comment whatever. But when the right time came he did something.

In the meantime, Rothstein shrewdly reckoned that he was safe—as safe as a man ever is on any betting proposition—in making the tremendous bet, so he telephoned the bookmaker and in rather a hesitating voice, as if doubtful and even fearful—his whole tone and manner indicating uncertainty—told the bookmaker that he would go through with his offer.

Was it a go: $400,000 against $300,000, Hourless to win? It certainly was, and the word was passed that sealed the bet. Mr. Hildreth said nothing to anybody until less than ten minutes before the horses were to go to the post. Then he called his assistant, Frank S. Hackett, and motioned him to one side.

"Frank," he said, "go over to the jockey house and tell Frankie Robinson that he is going to pilot Hourless in this race."

He wanted Robinson, since a substitution of jockeys was necessary; because the boy was a cool-headed youngster with a fine pair of hands and good judgment of pace. He had been riding Harry Payne Whitney's horse. When his name was posted instead of the name of Hourless' regular jockey, the crowd was dumfounded, and you could read a bookful in the faces of the ordinarily stony-faced gamblers.

$300,000 PROFIT

But it was too late to do anything about it, and in a minute or two more the horses were leaping forward to run the greatest race Hildreth says he ever saw. At the end of it, Hourless was in front by a clear length, having run the distance of a mile and a quarter in 2:02 and carrying a burden of 126 pounds.

There was plenty of honor and fame and not a little cash for Mr. Belmont and Sam Hildreth, and for Rothstein there was at least $300,000 wiled from the bookmaker, for if ever one gambler "outsmarted" another, it was done in that instance.

The probability is that Rothstein won a great deal more than $300,000, for it was not like him to confine himself to one bet.

War Debt Welchers

By James T. Williams, Jr.

Of the many definitions of eloquence handed down from the long past, none better describes "the language of Nature" than this one from the writings of our own Ralph Waldo Emerson. Said Emerson on this subject:

"Eloquence is the power to translate a truth into language perfectly intelligible to the person to whom you speak."

This is precisely the power with which Senator Johnson of California spoke a few days ago when he brought to an impressive conclusion a rambling discussion of what ought to be done about the unpaid war debts of a group of European nations now soliciting American sympathy by lofty pronunciamentos concerning the "sacredness" of the treaties they make and the "sanctity" of sanctions they would impose and look to the conscripted youth of America to enforce with their own blood and treasure.

JOHNSON'S WORDS

Said the statesman unafraid who represents at all times in the Senate of the United States not merely the sovereignty of the State of California but the people of the United States as a whole:

"I cannot sit idly by and listen to the appointment of a new commission on the part of my country to dicker again with debtors with whom we have already settled on their own terms.

"I cannot, for one instant, consent that we shall go, cap in hand, across the water, with the obligations solemnly agreed upon, and beg our debtors to give us a penny in the dollar or a shilling in the pound.

"The debts exist. They exist by virtue of agreements which have been made by commissions appointed by various countries. They exist upon the terms of the debtors themselves. Our country has been a generous creditor; these defaulting nations have been dishonest debtors.

KEEP SELF-RESPECT

"It is not consonant, in my opinion, with the self-respect of this nation to go begging those recalcitrant debtors, those countries which have welched upon their honest obligations, to give us a moiety of that which we agreed to take upon their prayers and upon their solicitation. We settled once by solemn treaties. Treaty breakers have the repudiation nations been.

"There is something more valuable to me than money in a nation such as ours. A nation which loses its self-respect, or becomes a mere barterer of that which is its just due, will be held not only in contempt by its own people but in contempt by its own debtors.

"While I quite agree with the Senator from Illinois that the appropriate authorities ought to dun these debtors, I shall not for one moment tolerate, so far as I am concerned, that we shall again appoint a commission to go across the water and to beg again that these debtors, upon their own terms, may settle the debts which are justly due, and which they themselves have admitted to be due.

"Mr. President, we can afford to lose the money. We cannot afford to lose our own self-respect."

Young Americans in high school who would learn the eloquence which "is vehement in simplicity," who would by the honesty of eloquence "persuade others by being in earnest" themselves, will do well to "read, mark, learn and inwardly digest" this memorable address of Senator Johnson on the floor of the Senate.
